THE PERFECT WORK.

What the People Accomplished on Tuesday.

Gen. Grant's Popular Majority Over 700,000.

Composition of the Next House of Representatives.

New-York's Contribution to the General Result.

The Keystone State Rolls Up 125,000 Majority.

Republican Gains in Every State in the Union.

Today we give corrected and more complete election returns from the different States, which will enable our readers to gain a clearer idea of the great victory achieved by the Republican Party throughout the country. It will be seen that our estimates of the results were below the actual figures, a fact we know would probably prove to be the case. For the first time in the annals of American journalism, the NEW-YORK TIMES gave its readers, yesterday, a concise statement of the result in thirty-five of the States of the Union, Oregon and Texas only being omitted from the entire list.

The returns published yesterday were obtained for the TIMES by our own correspondents, from the best sources, and were forwarded by telegraph as rapidly as collected. Over one thousand dispatches were received at this office during Tuesday night, and the facts and figures contained in them occupied nearly two of our broad pages. Not only did we give the probable majorities of the Presidential vote, but we added the result on minor tickets in the different States, so that a good idea might be gained of the political complexion of Congress and State Legislatures. This gratifying exhibit of news from the entire country was only secured by a large expenditure of money and time in preparation, as the work of organizing so large a staff of correspondents was a difficult matter. We did it, however, successfully, and are content. The sales of yesterday's issue reached 97,040 copies.

THE ELECTORAL COLLEGE.

The following table shows the result in the various States. Missouri is still in doubt, as is Texas—the latter not having yet closed its polls. The only other changes from the vote announced yesterday morning are in the majorities, which are very heavily increased, by fuller returns, over the moderate statements then made. The probabilities of Grant's carrying Virginia are confirmed. That he has carried Louisiana we regard beyond a doubt. The popular majorities are 57,375 greater than we published yesterday, and amount, in all, to 701,800. Only four States and 42 electoral votes are sure for Greeley, and this cannot be increased by more than two States and 23 electoral votes additional.

The following table gives the amended returns from Congressional districts, and shows the complexion of the next House of Representatives, as determined by the elections of October and November. NEW-YORK.

Grant's Majority, 51,000—The State Tickets Close Up to the Front Rank.

Our great victory in the Empire State becomes more magnificent with the coming in of almost every return. Excepting the disasters which occurred, from local causes, in Dutchess and Orange Counties, there is the same story everywhere of unprecedented Republican gains, until, as will be seen by the table below, the majority for Gen. Grant reaches the splendid total of 50,205. Some few of the counties are estimated from partial returns, and we believe that when the complete vote is received, this majority will be increased rather than diminished. Gen. Dix and the remainder of the State ticket keep well up with Gen. Grant, and the average Republican majority on these officers will be about 50,000. The Legislature is still more largely Republican than was stated yesterday, the figures now being 87 Republicans to 41 Democrats. From the list published this morning it will be seen that the Democratic Congressmen in this State have become extremely scarce, and their losses in the State have been enormous.

To accomplish these grand results the Republicans all over the State have worked in harmony and done wonders. New-York and Kings have cut down the Democratic majorities of former years at a rate that will soon wipe them out altogether. Albany, Erie, Chemung, Jefferson, Monroe, Oneida, Rensselaer, St. Lawrence, and many other counties have rolled up majorities which show that Liberal Republicanism was always a myth in our State and that Democracy is henceforth only a tradition.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Grant's Majority on Incomplete Returns 72,917—Washburn's Majority 71,000.

BOSTON, Nov. 6.—The vote of Massachusetts, nearly complete, foots up as follows, viz.: Grant, 151,077; Greeley, 77,860; Grant's majority, 73,217. Washburn's majority for Governor is 71,000.

The re-election of President Grant was celebrated here today by firing 100 guns on the Common.

CALIFORNIA.

Grant's Majority 5,000 in the State—The Congressional Vote—Returns Mixed.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 6.—The Republican State Central Committee estimate Grant's majority throughout the State at 5,000. Seventeen counties are to hear from, twelve of which are conceded for Greeley. The election of Coghlan and Houghton, Republicans, for Congress, is doubtful.

There was a falling off of the vote in this city compared to 1868, which is attributed to the arbitrary action of the Republican State Central Committee in their ruling against the vote on the Colorado subsidy.

The full returns of the city make Grant's majority 527. Clayton, Rep., for Congress, has 1,604 majority. The vote on the proposition to subsidize the Colorado Railroad is: for the subsidy, 145; against, 13,848.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 6.—Returns from the interior are too meagre to admit of more than indications of the result. Grant has made large gains over his vote of 1868, except in this city, and nearly everywhere throughout the State gains over Booth's vote are reported. Grant's majority may be safely put down at 5,000; some claim 8,000. In the Second and Third Congressional Districts Page and Coghlan are probably elected over Cognlan and Luttrell. The contest in the Fourth District is close, but it is believed that Houghton, Republican, carries the day.

MARYLAND.

The State Outside of Baltimore Gives Grant Two Thousand Majority—List of Republican Congressmen Elected.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 6.—The Republicans have carried two Congressional districts sure, by electing Lloyd Lowndes in the Sixth, and William J. Albert in the Fifth. The Democrats claim Stevenson Archer's re-election in the Second, over Hancock, Republican, by fourteen; but the Republicans claim Hancock's election by twenty-six. The First District is in doubt, also the Republicans are confident that Spencer has beaten Wilson, Democrat, by a small majority. Maryland has been a Waterloo for Greeley, as he will not get in the State 3,000. The Republicans have carried twelve or thirteen counties out of the twenty, and have over 2,000 majority in the State outside of the city. Greeley has everywhere run behind the Democratic vote for Congressmen. The result shows that if the Republicans had put a good man, as for instance Charles C. Fulton, in nomination in the Fourth District, Swann would have been beaten. The record of Major Griswold, the independent Democratic candidate, which he made in Richmond during the war, lost him hundreds of Republican votes—enough, at least, to have elected a more popular man.

Nature of the Local Vote.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 6.—Albert, Republican, for Congress, from the Fifth District, receives 100 majority in St. Mary's County; 97 majority in Howard County, and over 200 majority in Charles County. Merrick, Democrat, for Congress from the Fifth District, receives 163 majority in the Seventeenth Ward of this city; 92 majority from two districts in Baltimore County, and 40 majority in Calvert County. The indications are that Albert is returned by several hundred majority.

In the Sixth District, Lowndes, Republican, is elected for Congress by 1,700; 1,700 majority.

NEW-JERSEY.

Astounding Results in the Third Congressional District—Republican Gain of 4,500.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Nov. 6.—The result in the Third Congressional District of New-Jersey is an astounding Republican victory. In Union County Clark, Republican, has 1,800 majority; in Middlesex, 1,000 majority, and Monmouth gives Patterson, Democrat, sixty-five majority. Clark's majority in the district is 2,600. Parker, Democrat, had in this district, last year, about 3,600 majority, which shows a Republican gain this year of 4,500.

We gain two members of the Legislature in Union, and one in Monmouth.

The Congressional Vote—Republican Majority 18,084.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 6.—The majorities of the members of Congress elect are as follows:

Dist.	Republican.	Majority.
1.	John W. Hazleton	6500
2.	Samuel A. Dobbins	2000
3.	Amos Clark	2600
5.	William W. Phelps	2600
6.	Marcus L. Ward	5676
7.	Isaac W. Scudder	1300
	Total	20684
	Democrat.
4.	Robert Hamilton	2100
	Republican majority	18584

ILLINOIS.

Grant's Majority Between 50,000 and 60,000—Fifteen Republican Congressmen.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 6.—Chicago City and County give over 10,000 majority for Grant.

The State gives about 50,000, and possibly 60,000 majority for Grant.

The Legislature is Republican on joint ballot by thirty majority.

It is probable that fifteen Republican Congressmen are elected.

Chicago Republican Nearly all the Way Through, and the State for Grant and Oglesby by 33,000.

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 6.—The returns from this city are not yet complete. So far as the vote is counted it indicates that Grant's majority in this city is between 7,000 and 8,000, and in the county, 10,000.

Rice, Ward and Farwell (Republicans) are elected to Congress.

The City Council will be largely Republican, and the Republicans elect, probably, six out of seven State Senators, and twelve out of twenty Representatives.

The majority for Grant in the State is estimated at 35,000, while that for Oglesby for Governor will be something less.

The Republicans will have a majority in both Houses of the Legislature, and the estimate sent out last night on Congressmen, giving the Republicans twelve out of nineteen, appears to be correct from the present returns. The returns from the interior come in slowly.

Twelve towns in Mercer County give Ray, Republican, for Congress, 490 majority. Seventeen townships in Hancock County, official, Neece, Democrat, for Congress, 271 majority, eight towns to hear from. In McLean County Grant's majority is 2,450; Oglesby, for Governor, 2,400, and McNulta, for Congress, 2,500.

Cairo gives a Republican majority, and the Republican claims a majority of 500 over the vote of 1868. The Republicans claim the election of Clements, for Congress, in the Eighteenth District, by over 1,000 majority, while the Democrats concede it by 300.

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.—Sixty-seven wards and precincts of this city, leaving sixteen not yet heard from, give Grant 5,761 majority. The majority of Rice (Rep.) over Cole (Lib.) in the First Congressional District, so far as heard from, is 2,601; Ward (Rep.) over Harrison (Dem.) in the Second District, 2,816; Farwell (Rep.) over Lemoyne (Dem.) in the Third District, 365. These majorities include only the city vote of these districts. The present returns give Oglesby, (Rep.) for Governor, 4,300 majority in the city.

NEVADA.

A Majority for Grant Conceded.

NEVADA CITY, Nov. 5.—Nevada gives a majority for Grant. The result on the Legislative ticket is in doubt.

ARKANSAS.

Returns Come in Slowly—The State Claimed by Both Sides.

LITTLE ROCK, Nov. 5.—The vote of this county is very close. Dispatches from Ouchita, Dallas, St. Francis, Prairie, and Van Buren Counties report majorities for Greeley and for Brooks (Liberal) for Governor. Jefferson, Phillips, Monroe, Woodruff, and Independence report majorities for Grant and for Baxter (Republican) for Governor. Both sides claim the State.

ALABAMA.

Gains Reported for Both Sides—The Congressional Delegation.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 5.—Dispatches and reports received here indicate Democratic gains, as follows, based on the vote of 1870: In Henry County, 700; Jefferson, 800; Barbour, 600; Clay, 400; Dallas, 600; Marengo, 1,000; Lee, 800; Lowndes, 300; Bullock, 300; Pike, 600; Mobile, 1,000; Barry, 300. The Republicans gain in the following counties: Tuscaloosa, 800; Shelby, 300; Madison, 1,200; Greene, 1,500; Sumter, 1,200; Morgan, 300; Colbert, 400; Lawrence, 400; Lauderdale, 300; Cleburne, 300.

Both parties are confident of the Senate. Most of the Republican strongholds have been heard from, while the strong Democratic counties inaccessible to the telegraph have not been. The election of Bromberg (Dem.) to Congress from the First District is conceded, as Turner and Joseph, both colored, Republican candidates, divided the Republican vote. Rapier, (colored,) Republican, is elected in the Second District, probably by 1,000 majority. Handley, (Democrat,) in the Third District; Hays, (Republican,) in the Fourth District; Caldwell, (Democrat,) in the Fifth District, and Sloss, (Democrat,) in the Sixth District.

MOBILE, Ala., Nov. 6.—Mobile County gives Greeley 378 majority. Bromberg, (Liberal,) for Congress, is elected over Turner, (Rep.) the present member, by 1,600 majority.

MISSOURI.

The State Still in Doubt—Grosvenor, "Bereaved," for Congress, Redeated.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 6.—The news from the State gives more encouragement to the Republicans. Upon the first blush everything seemed to favor the opposition, but later news surely indicates Grant stock on the rise. It is almost too much to expect to carry the State for the party of freedom, yet our hopes and expectations grow brighter. There has been a wonderful scratching of tickets in the county and State, and hence the uncertainty of the result before the official count.

About half the Republicans on the county ticket of St. Louis are reported elected. Stanard, for Congress in the First District, is elected over Grosvenor by 140 majority. Krum, Circuit Judge, is elected. Many counties in the State that have never gone Republican before now register for Grant and the Radical ticket. It is still reported that Parker and Burdett are elected, and probablyRavens.

The O'Conor ticket has received more votes in the State than anybody expected. The Germans and rebels have gone for Greeley rather strong, while many war and Union Democrats voted for Grant. The best counties are not heard from, and it is thought the Eastern counties will redound to the interest of Grant and Wilson. If the State has gone for Greeley the majority will be small, and the victory will be mainly on our side, for we expect to carry the Legislature and thereby secure a United States Senator in place of Frank Blair.

Six Republican Congressmen Out of Thirteen—A Republican Successor to Blair in the Senate Probable.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 6—10 P. M.—Official returns give Greeley 2,831 majority in St. Louis County. Stanard, Rep., is elected by 142 majority over Wm. Grosvenor, Dem., in First Congressional District. Wells, Dem., has 1,200 majority over Brison in the Second District. The Third District is very close between Hilton, Republican, and Stone, Democrat. Both parties claim it. Nothing definite will be known till the vote is counted officially.

The State shows Republican gains everywhere, but not enough to counteract the heavy losses in St. Louis yet. Only thirty counties have been heard from out of 114. It is probable the State will give Greeley from 10,000 to 15,000 majority.

Hatcher, ex-rebel and Democrat, is elected in the Fourth Congressional District; Comingo, Democrat, in the Eighth; ex-rebel Gen. Clarke, Democrat, in the Eleventh; and ex-rebel Col. Buckner, Democrat, in the Thirteenth. Benton, Republican, probably elected in the Sixth; Parker, Republican, in the Ninth, and Hyde, Republican, in the Tenth. The Fifth, Seventh and Twelfth Districts are in doubt, with slight chances in favor of the Republicans. At a safe estimate, the Republicans have elected six members of Congress, leaving seven not yet heard from, give Grant 5,761 majority. The majority of Rice (Rep.) over Cole (Lib.) in the First Congressional District, so far as heard from, is 2,601; Ward (Rep.) over Harrison (Dem.) in the Second District, 2,816; Farwell (Rep.) over Lemoyne (Dem.) in the Third District, 365. These majorities include only the city vote of these districts. The present returns give Oglesby, (Rep.) for Governor, 4,300 majority in the city.

ALABAMA.

Gains Reported for Both Sides—The Congressional Delegation.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 5.—Dispatches and reports received here indicate Democratic gains, as follows, based on the vote of 1870: In Henry County, 700; Jefferson, 800; Barbour, 600; Clay, 400; Dallas, 600; Marengo, 1,000; Lee, 800; Lowndes, 300; Bullock, 300; Pike, 600; Mobile, 1,000; Barry, 300. The Republicans gain in the following counties: Tuscaloosa, 800; Shelby, 300; Madison, 1,200; Greene, 1,500; Sumter, 1,200; Morgan, 300; Colbert, 400; Lawrence, 400; Lauderdale, 300; Cleburne, 300.

Both parties are confident of the Senate. Most of the Republican strongholds have been heard from, while the strong Democratic counties inaccessible to the telegraph have not been. The election of Bromberg (Dem.) to Congress from the First District is conceded, as Turner and Joseph, both colored, Republican candidates, divided the Republican vote. Rapier, (colored,) Republican, is elected in the Second District, probably by 1,000 majority. Handley, (Democrat,) in the Third District; Hays, (Republican,) in the Fourth District; Caldwell, (Democrat,) in the Fifth District, and Sloss, (Democrat,) in the Sixth District.

MOBILE, Ala., Nov. 6.—Mobile County gives Greeley 378 majority. Bromberg, (Liberal,) for Congress, is elected over Turner, (Rep.) the present member, by 1,600 majority.

MISSOURI.

The State Still in Doubt—Grosvenor, "Bereaved," for Congress, Redeated.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 6.—The news from the State gives more encouragement to the Republicans. Upon the first blush everything seemed to favor the opposition, but later news surely indicates Grant stock on the rise. It is almost too much to expect to carry the State for the party of freedom, yet our hopes and expectations grow brighter. There has been a wonderful scratching of tickets in the county and State, and hence the uncertainty of the result before the official count.

About half the Republicans on the county ticket of St. Louis are reported elected. Stanard, for Congress in the First District, is elected over Grosvenor by 140 majority. Krum, Circuit Judge, is elected. Many counties in the State that have never gone Republican before now register for Grant and the Radical ticket. It is still reported that Parker and Burdett are elected, and probably Ravens.

The O'Conor ticket has received more votes in the State than anybody expected. The Germans and rebels have gone for Greeley rather strong, while many war and Union Democrats voted for Grant. The best counties are not heard from, and it is thought the Eastern counties will redound to the interest of Grant and Wilson. If the State has gone for Greeley the majority will be small, and the victory will be mainly on our side, for we expect to carry the Legislature and thereby secure a United States Senator in place of Frank Blair.

Six Republican Congressmen Out of Thirteen—A Republican Successor to Blair in the Senate Probable.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 6—10 P. M.—Official returns give Greeley 2,831 majority in St. Louis County. Stanard, Rep., is elected by 142 majority over Wm. Grosvenor, Dem., in First Congressional District. Wells, Dem., has 1,200 majority over Brison in the Second District. The Third District is very close between Hilton, Republican, and Stone, Democrat. Both parties claim it. Nothing definite will be known till the vote is counted officially.

The State shows Republican gains everywhere, but not enough to counteract the heavy losses in St. Louis yet. Only thirty counties have been heard from out of 114. It is probable the State will give Greeley from 10,000 to 15,000 majority.

Hatcher, ex-rebel and Democrat, is elected in the Fourth Congressional District; Comingo, Democrat, in the Eighth; ex-rebel Gen. Clarke, Democrat, in the Eleventh; and ex-rebel Col. Buckner, Democrat, in the Thirteenth. Benton, Republican, probably elected in the Sixth; Parker, Republican, in the Ninth, and Hyde, Republican, in the Tenth. The Fifth, Seventh and Twelfth Districts are in doubt, with slight chances in favor of the Republicans. At a safe estimate, the Republicans have elected six members of Congress, leaving seven not yet heard from, give Grant 5,761 majority. The majority of Rice (Rep.) over Cole (Lib.) in the First Congressional District, so far as heard from, is 2,601; Ward (Rep.) over Harrison (Dem.) in the Second District, 2,816; Farwell (Rep.) over Lemoyne (Dem.) in the Third District, 365. These majorities include only the city vote of these districts. The present returns give Oglesby, (Rep.) for Governor, 4,300 majority in the city.

NEVADA.

A Majority for Grant Conceded.

NEVADA CITY, Nov. 5.—Nevada gives a majority for Grant. The result on the Legislative ticket is in doubt.

ARKANSAS.

Returns Come in Slowly—The State Claimed by Both Sides.

LITTLE ROCK, Nov. 5.—The vote of this county is very close. Dispatches from Ouchita, Dallas, St. Francis, Prairie, and Van Buren Counties report majorities for Greeley and for Brooks (Liberal) for Governor. Jefferson, Phillips, Monroe, Woodruff, and Independence report majorities for Grant and for Baxter (Republican) for Governor. Both sides claim the State.

TUESDAY'S ELECTION.

The General Feeling Inspired by the Grand Results.

Opinions of Citizens on the Benefits to be Enjoyed Through the Triumph of the Republican Party.

MR. HAVEMEYER'S POLICY.

The results of the national and State elections having so completely answered the popular expectation, the political discussion yesterday seemed to hinge entirely on the Municipal contest, and especially on the defeat of O'Brien and the election of Havemeyer to the Mayoralty. Among the people generally, and especially in the business portion of the City, there seemed to be a feeling of satisfaction at the result, the adherents of Lawrence being content with the defeat of Apollo Hall, and professedly surprised that their candidate (Lawrence) should have polled so large a vote. Those of the business community who backed Lawrence regret his defeat, but admit that the City is "safe" with Havemeyer. Some few who advocated and voted for the Tammany candidate, have suddenly come over to the winning side, and now declare themselves active Reformers, past and present. Mr. Havemeyer's friends and supporters have little to say, and profess no surprise at the general result. The O'Brien men, however, are utterly crushed. They refused to believe the figures at first announced, and went home yesterday morning trying to convince themselves that their candidate had been elected, although some few gave up the fight. Yesterday, the Senator's adherents scanned the morning papers in vain for comfort, but found nothing but discouragement in the figures presented. Among the betting men O'Brien had been a favorite throughout. This class at first utterly repudiated the returns, but at last the facts became too evident to be further disputed, but, to the last moment, they kept up a semblance of confidence. At an early hour yesterday, a few strangers returned to the pool-rooms, where a few sanguine sparks tried to revive the various pools interested by circulating reports that the returns were false, and that O'Brien was now declared elected. But these rumors were summarily dismissed by an unanswerable demand for the "figures." Some one suggested that pools be started on Lawrence and Havemeyer, but the suggestion found no favor. The only excitement during the day arose from the rumor of a plot to count in Lawrence, which, heated as it was by Tammany's old record, for a time gained credence. In an up-town pool-room, where the betting chiefly obtained, a betting man, better equally assured in the semi-inspired stream, that Havemeyer was to be counted out. The rumor revived the interest for a while, but eventually the company gave up the fight, and went home.

AROUND CITY HALL.

Unlike all preceding elections for Mayor, the public offices and corridors of the City Hall were deserted yesterday morning by those whose official presence was necessary. Occasionally a politician would rush along the corridor and into one of the offices with an inquiry as to the result of the election in his district, but from the appearance of his face, the reply seemed to invariably cause a modified countenance, as every one felt that the tenure of his position hung on a very slender thread. Some of the officials were conversing with each other, and one made the remark, that "the chimney would have to be fixed some how, or they would be smoked out of the City." This reply that "one day for firing cannon had passed, as the Committee of Seventy would be certain to look after the interests of their candidate." The first speaker then remarked that "the Seventy would have nothing to do with the matter, and things must be fixed before they let hold of it." A sudden shake of the head was the only reply, and the conversation dropped.

Later in the afternoon the report was circulated that other districts had been heard from, overriding Havemeyer's majority, and giving Lawrence an advantage. But no authentic report could be traced to no reliable source. A doubt was mingled so much with the hope as to afford but little consolation. Some attributed the rumor to the operations of sporting men who were trying to hedge their bets; others to certain small-fry politicians who were seeking to advertise a temporary popularity by their superior knowledge; but very few place any decided confidence in the report. Even the usual crowd of hangers-on about the basement of the Court-house, ever ready to give currency to every new favorable rumor, whispered the story with some degree of caution.

IN THE COURTS.

The ordinary business of the State Civil Courts was hardly perceptibly interrupted yesterday, as a result of the election, either jurors, litigants or lawyers seeming to be in readiness to proceed with the cases. Among lawyers a pretty general feeling of satisfaction seemed to prevail in reference to the result, all expressing the opinion during the day, while the canvass of the vote was still in progress, that though if it was found that Mr. Lawrence was defeated, the people should not be much disappointed in either Lawrence or Havemeyer. Much dissatisfaction and disappointment was exhibited by the O'Brien adherents, and several exciting discussions occurred in the building during the day, arising out of charges of unfairness on the part of some of O'Brien's professed friends. With the result of the State and national elections in favor of Gen. Dix and Gen. Grant, the members of the Bar expressed very generally satisfaction, it being universally conceded that the stability and prosperity of the nation were secured for the coming four years by leaving the Administration of Grant undisturbed, and that the credit and honor of the City had been saved by keeping the O'Brien crowd out of the City Hall.

AT THE HOTELS.

At the hotels, yesterday, the crowds of politicians and idle spectators which had filled the halls and blocked up the entrances for weeks past, had disappeared, and the guests could again be found without trouble. Among these the elections of the previous day formed largely the topic of conversation, but with a certain reserve which an excited desire to thrust political aside and to enter once more on the commonplace business of buying and selling and the steady work of the commercial world without any disturbing influence. It was refreshing to meet in one of the parlors of the St. Nicholas the perfect freedom from anxiety with which a party of business men were discussing their plans for the future, and the confident expression of their belief in a continued career of prosperity for the City and the nation, with Havemeyer as Mayor and Grant as President for another term. It was the same with the Fifth-avenue and Metropolitan, though at the latter there were a few who had not learned how to submit to the will of the people with a good grace. But they formed the exception to the rule, a decidedly buoyant and hopeful spirit prevailing everywhere else.

IN FINANCIAL CIRCLES.

The feeling among the bankers, brokers and merchants down-town, yesterday, was decidedly satisfactory. Although some were disappointed in their favorite candidates, yet, as shown by the votes of the people, it was generally believed that the finances and welfare of the country will be better assured by the election of Grant than of Greeley. These parties who had faith in the success of the Administration ticket, and backed it with their money, were busily engaged in squaring accounts with those who were unfortunate enough to place their trust in, and invest their money on, the hero of Chappaquaque.

There was less dealing in stocks than usual, the chief interest centering on the lateness election returns. Several heavy sales were effected in the Stock Exchange on the results of Lawrence for Mayor, toward noon, when it was thought that the vote of New-York was between him and Havemeyer; they were immediately taken up by friends of the latter gentleman.

What Mr. Havemeyer Says—Honesty in Office.

As to who was elected Mayor, Mr. Wm. F. Havemeyer, the successful candidate, was, yesterday, apparently the least interested person in the City. He came down to his office, at No. 111 Broadway, at his usual time, and, in conversation with a TIMES reporter, who asked him what his majority was, he replied that he did not even know of his election; announcement when yesterday morning's newspapers said. In reply to a question asking him what his office would be on Monday, he answered that he wished it supposed that he has none. There are very many things to consider on that point, he said, in the interim, before he would accept. Even if he had any idea, he would not be changed, he continued. The first thing he will do is to carefully study the City charter of 1870, and he will try to prepare himself thoroughly before he goes into office. While very reserve in declaring the incompetency of persons and expressing a policy at this time, he intimated that he will make no removals in office in the City Departments, but, he was expecting, continued, that he thinks, certain reforms are needed. That he was not even a member of the last year's committee of 37; that he does not believe in the ability of a committee to be made up of 37 men, and that he will have no personal party by hasty and revolutionary action. He alluded to the form of City Government existing when he was Mayor before, and protested against the system by which the Board of Aldermen, who served without pay and were hard to get really representing the people, with the Mayor had control over the heads of Departments, they could not raise money or make any contracts without the concurrence of a committee of the Aldermen. He illustrated the confidence reposed in the Aldermen then, and the character of the men themselves, by alluding to the cost and manner of construction of the Croton Aqueduct, and comparing it with the new Court-house. He thinks Mr. O'Brien, an honest man who would have done the City good if elected, "and I, I expect, Mr. Havemeyer," will try to, at least, do the City no harm."

WHAT OTHERS THINKING SAY.

Search was made for Mr. O'Brien yesterday, but with ill-success, to learn his theory as to the cause of his defeat, his chances having seemed so good until election day. Mr. Peter Mitchell, a leading Apollo Hall Reformer, and intimate of Mr. O'Brien, said that Mr. O'Brien has more personal friends than any man in the City. He was sure his defeat was owing to the fact that while few doubt his honesty and ability for the office, he is not a man of culture, and the silent vote was against him for that reason only.

Settling a Wager—Log Rolling on Broadway.

About 2 o'clock yesterday, in the midst of the rain, a well-dressed man was seen engaged in the task of rolling up Broadway a log, as big round as a flour-barrel and about five feet long. Occasionally it would slip on the wet pavement, and an oath would point up the street. Trucks and stages made way for the roller, who from time to time grappled with his log, placed it in a proper position with his hands, and with vigorous kicks sped it on its way. The log was to be rolled from the Astor House to the Fifth-avenue Hotel, and from the time log and man took to make a block, five hours might be consumed before the thing reached their goal. The log was inscription, "Three cheers for Jimmy O'Brien;" the other letters of the name and other legends which decorated the log being defaced by the mud of the street.

The Union Republican Congressional Executive Committee has forwarded the following letter to Thomas Nast, Esq.:

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 31, 1872.

SIR: As this Committee is about to close the document work of the still pending but about to be completed political campaign, we feel that we shall not fully perform our duty without thanking you cordially for the efficient aid we have derived from your skilful hand and fertile but truthful imagination. Very truly your obedient servant,

The Result in Staten Island.

The vote in Richmond County gives Republican majorities for all candidates except for Justice of Sessions, the Democratic candidate receiving a majority of 19. Gen. Grant's majority was 156. Thirty-five votes were cast for Mr. O'Connor, Gen. Dix had a majority of 283, and Mr. Scudder, for Congress, 154; Tremain, for Congress at large, 72; Hilger, for Assembly, 548, and Golden, for Coroner, 93.

Long Island Election Returns.

Suffolk County has given unprecedented Republican majorities, Grant receiving 1,348; Dix, 1,309; Scudder, for Congress, 1,300, and French, for County Treasurer, 1,500; John S. Maroy is re-elected to the Assembly by about 300.

Queens County, hitherto Democratic by about 1,200 majority, gives Greeley about 150; Dix, small majority; Democratic State ticket, about 150; Republican county candidates by small majorities. Covert, Democrat, for Congress, has 224 majority; Prince, Republican, is elected to the Assembly in the First District, by a majority of 18; Dickey, Democrat, in the Second District, by 203.

The Congressional district, which includes Richmond County, elects Henry J. Scudder, Republican, by 1,300 majority, a Republican gain of 2,700.

*Estimated.

The above table gives the majorities for Congressman in the Fourth District of this State, with only one Ward estimated, and that very moderately. Mr. Crooke's victory is very flattering. It is specially due to his popularity in the country towns, which he carried by a majority of 1,066, a gain of fully 1,800 over the vote of 1870.

The Fifth New-Jersey District.

The Fifth Congressional District of New-Jersey, which contains a large number of inhabitants formerly resident in New-York, has been very sharply contested during the canvass, and here the Republicans have gained a brilliant success, carrying all three counties, and securing a majority of at least 2,500. The district contains the Counties of Bergen, Passaic and Morris. Passaic and Morris usually give Republican majorities, but Bergen has always gone Democratic; it is an old Democratic stronghold, and there is, therefore, great rejoicing at the success of the Bergen County Republicans, for they have carried their member of Congress, Wm. Walter Phelps, a resident of the county, well known in New-York, and also probably the whole county ticket. The county, which was more bitterly and thoroughly contested than ever before by the Democrats, has given a majority for Greeley; even this time, but Phelps, the Republican candidate for Congress, a resident of the county, carried it by 20 majority, running just 100 ahead of the ticket. We give below Bergen County by townships, giving the majorities of Phelps and his opponent, Woodruff:

AFFAIRS IN JAPAN.

Political Status—Foreign Relations—Treaties with Corea—The Japanese Customs Vanishing.

From a Special Correspondent.

YEDO, Tuesday, Sept. 17, 1872.

Five years have elapsed since your correspondent arrived in Japan, three of which have been spent in the service of two of the late Princes, and another spent in intercourse with Europeans. Since my return, three months ago, from the interior, it has been difficult to realize the wonderful changes that have taken place since 1868 in the capital—changes which at a distance of four hundred miles were certainly felt, but in a very much modified degree. In fact, what it has taken other nations centuries to accomplish, has been done by Japan in a couple of years—the complete transformation of a feudal system into a constitutional government, and a government that is admirable in its details.

At the close of the war with the late Tycoon the different daimios or princes yielded their provinces to the Mikado, each noble being retained as the hereditary Lieutenant of the Emperor, to govern his former territory. The names of their titles were changed; their incomes reduced to one-tenth of what they were formerly, although in reality they left them pecuniarily in a better position, as this tenth was for their own individual use, whereas before they had to provide from their revenues the incomes of all their vassals and retainers; and, further, as a token of their submission to the Imperial will, they were required to remove their abode from the "Honmaru," or citadel, to one of the outer inclosures of their castles.

This went on very smoothly until the Spring of last year, when the princes were all summoned to repair to Yedo, where they were informed that the Government had decided to take complete possession of their countries, to appoint Governors from the capital, and that they must remain in Yedo as hostages, thus providing against the contingency of rebellion. There seemed, however, to be some idea of what was going to happen when the Daimios left their capitals. In most cases the parting with their people was very affecting—in two or three instances the latter refused to let their lords depart—and in the province of Aki it was only after blood had been shed that the Prince was able to embark. The Prince of Bizen spent the four days previous to his departure in bidding farewell to the tombs of his ancestors and visiting their shrines in state; all musical instruments were hushed, as is the case during the period of mourning for any of his family; and the final taking leave was touching in the extreme. For a distance of some two and a half miles was the road lined with his retainers in full ceremonial dress, all being stationed according to rank, beginning with the former first Karo, and all kneeling. It was for the last time that most of them were to see the scion of a race which they had been taught to reverence ere they left the mother's breast.

Since my return I have visited my former masters, the Princes of Kaga and Bizen, and found them living in miserably small houses in the most secluded parts of Yedo, their former palatial town residences having also been taken by the Government to turn into public offices. I was shocked at the contrast with their former splendor.

The new Provincial Governors, as well as all the high officers of the Mikado's Government, are now appointed according to their ability, without any regard to birth or rank, many of the highest having come from very humble origin, and with but few exceptions they are young men. A liberal foreign policy seems to be a sine qua non to hold an important office, whereas six years ago it would have cost a minister his place at least.

It must not be supposed that all this has transpired without some show of resistance. In several provinces, among others Kaga, Bizen, Bancho, Tosa and Bizen, have the farmers attempted revolts, but acting independently of each other and with no organized plan, the rebels were easily put down by the Imperial troops. To give you an idea of the veneration entertained by the people for their old masters, I will mention an incident that occurred in Bizen. The rising there having continued for four days, notwithstanding the utmost efforts of the troops, considerable alarm was manifested by the Governor. Villages were being burned in every direction by the discontented farmers, and the capital, Okayama, itself threatened, when, as a last resort, the Governor went to the aged father of the late Prince, who was living there in retirement, and entreated him to appeal to the rebels. He rode out attended by only two followers, and in a single day quelled the revolution; he begged the people, for the sake of his son and himself, to submit to the will of the Mikado, and all prostrated themselves before the helpless old man, who thus restored tranquillity.

Now, however, perfect order appears to reign throughout the Empire; the army is concentrated in Yedo, where it is drilled by French officers, and really presents a very soldier-like appearance. Its real merit has yet to be proven, nor do I think that an opportunity will long be wanting. Japan still casts longing eyes on its old tributary Corea, and the independent, not to say insulting, bearing of late manifested by the latter is not without its effect here.

Besides, the approval which the Japanese believe a war against Corea would meet with from the United States, has also great weight with them. It is singular how completely America has won the confidence of Japan since the advent of Minister De Long, when we remember that before his arrival no nationality was less in favor than the United States. But Mr. De Long's honesty of purpose and intelligent firmness, together with a quiet, dignified bearing, took this Government completely by surprise, and has cemented a friendship as seldom exists between two nations. It is true that the Yedo Government is disappointed that Iwakura's mission failed in concluding a treaty in Washington which would have greatly facilitated the negotiation of the treaties to be made with the European Powers. For the moment it may in a measure tend to cool the unusually pleasant relations with the United States, if in Europe the terms rejected in Washington be accepted, which is more than doubtful. In nearly every Government department are Americans employed, and with but few exceptions—engaged by the Japanese without consulting Mr. De Long—excellent men have been selected. Certain it is that no country is so much esteemed here as our own, attributable solely to the wise and liberal policy pursued by our present Minister to a very sensitive and impressionable people. The Tribune's recent abuse of Mr. De Long seems very astonishing after his repeated praises of him, especially as, in a paragraph which I inclose to you, cut from the Japan Mail of Sept. 21, the Tribune's Yedo correspondent disclaims the authorship of the slanderous article:

"We are informed that the reflections in the New-York Tribune on the subject of Gen. Capron's mission, to which we drew attention last week, were not made by the correspondent of that journal in this country, but are to be found in an editorial on the relations existing between Japan and America. We are pleased therefore to believe the Tribune's correspondent from any share in these reflections, the more so that while we see him at a great distance, we are anxious to do him entire justice. We have always gladly acknowledged the ability of his letters, though we think his views lack comprehensiveness, as we recently endeavored to show."

Evidently it is the Tribune's policy to vilify everything under President Grant's Administration, but it would have done better to select some more vulnerable point than the United States Legation to Japan, which is universally respected for the able manner in which it is conducted. A joint expedition against Corea, composed of a few United States ships of war, Japan furnishing transports and troops, would, in my opinion, be very effective and inexpensive; it could impose any treaty, or even extinguish the existence of Corea, and would have a most salutary effect upon China, who is overreaching her slower and more pensive neighbor. In fact, a rumor of such a expedition, commanding at a man-of-war and transports, is to leave shortly for Corea under the charge of a high officer of the Foreign Department, the son of Iwakura, Minister of the Mikado. It appears that heretofore the Prince of Tsushima, a noble lying between Japan and Corea, has been the sole medium of communication between the two countries, and the Coreans refuse to hold any correspondence with Japan, unless coming through him. The Yedo Government now suspects the Prince's loyalty, and have reason to believe that he has willfully brought about this state of things to further his own ends. It is with a view of positively ascertaining how far these suspicions are justified, that the Imperial Envoy is going direct to the Corean Government.

Japan's ambition is to place herself on an equal footing with the western nations, to which there remains now but one obstacle—their antipathy to, and intolerance of, Christianity. Notwithstanding the rapid strides made by the present Government in all other respects, on this point alone it appears to be immovable; nor has the severity shown to the native converts been relaxed in the slightest degree. It seems difficult for them to realize that Christianity is the tie that unites the family of civilized nations, which they cannot enter until they acknowledge its truths. The Department of Religion is even trying to suppress Buddhism, which coming here originally from China, has become almost the general religion of the people; in many instances the Sintoo and Buddhist temples being united under the same priests. The subsidies heretofore granted by the Emperor to the Buddhist priests have been withdrawn, and their once imposing temples are rapidly going to ruin. Most of them have been dismantled, and the bronze works of art they contained sold for the bare value of the metal.

To the lover of antiquity it is sad to see "Old" Japan thus vanishing, especially as it was the last remnant of an age of chivalry, which while admitting the blessings of civilization, we can but regard with admiration and respect. To a whole day's journey through Yedo one hardly meets a single Japanese of the old school, that is, one who has not adopted something foreign in his bearing or dress. It is the class born of gentle blood, called "samurai," that have most suffered by the recent changes. Their incomes have been reduced to next to nothing; in many cases to less than one per cent of what they before enjoyed, and yet they are patient! Unable to work, and consequently incapable of earning a living, numbers of them are reduced to want. Among my own friends, two young nobles of Kaga, driven to despair, have destroyed themselves by "harikari." Hiki Takewaki, a nobleman of Bizen, whose follower, Také Lenzaburo, committed harikari in the presence of the foreign representatives at Hiogo, some years ago, for having fired on Europeans at that port—a man quoted as one of the haughtiest in the land, is now the proprietor of a small riding-yard, where for a few cash any coolie can ride and drink his sake. And yet, four years ago, when the man's train passed through the streets of Okayama, the populace had to kneel. These are not exceptional instances; it is the story of thousands.

The prosperity of "new" Japan depends greatly on the results Iwakura's mission will accomplish, and the tenor of the new treaties to be made by it. If the country can outlive the next two or three years without any violent reaction, the Government will attain a strength not to be shaken by any ordinary rebellion, and we shall have witnessed decay the last trace of the Middle Ages. Amy Robsart's Tomb.

Mr. L. P. Earwaker, B. A., Honorary Secretary to the Oxford Architectural and Historical Society, has forwarded the following interesting account to the Oxford Undergraduates' Journal: "Rev. J. Burgon, the Vicar of St. Mary's, has caused an inscription to be cut on the top one of the three steps leading to the chancel of St. Mary's Church, commemorating the site of the interment of the ill-fated Amy Robsart. The inscription is as follows: 'In a vault of brick, at the upper end of this quire, was buried Amy Robsart, wife of Lord Robert Dudley, K. G., Sunday, 22d September, A. D. 1560.' We have often wondered why no stone was ever placed to mark the site of Lady Dudley's tomb, for it has long been known that she was buried with great pomp 'in the Church of our Lady in the towne of Oxforde.' The full account of the funeral ceremony is given in a very illegible manuscript among the Dugdale MSS. in the Bodleian, but it is unfortunately far too long to quote here. It contains numerous interesting passages as showing the great pomp and ceremony with which the body was brought from Gloucester College a lytell without the towne of Oxford' to St. Mary's Church, where, 'in the mydell of the ile in the upper ende was made a herse' with all due appurtenances. The procession to the church must have been on that Sunday morning, now over 300 years ago, a very imposing sight, for 'after the pore men and women in gownes' came the 'Universities, 2 and 2, together, according to the degree of the Colleges, and before every house their officers with their staves, then 'the quere in surplesses singenge and after them the minester.' After them followed the officials from the Heralds' College all in their mourning habits, and 'the corpes borne by 8 tale gromen for the way was farre,' then the chief mourners and finally 'the lady of Oxford and his brethren.' They entered in at the west door of the church, and the body was placed on the hearse, and on 'eche syde of the hersse stood 2 gentlemen holdinge the behenneteles and at the feet stood 1 boy held the great banner,' and then the service began. After 'sarteyne prayers, then the 10 commandments, the quire answering in Peykesor go, then the Pystle and the Gospell began, and after the Gospell the offeringe,' and when this was finished 'the sermon began, made by Doctor Babynger, who ministred the Scott Doctrynes as Domine mordantur.' The more the death of Lady Amy Dudley is investigated the clearer does it appear that the traditional accounts are almost entirely wrong. An inquest was held with all due formalities immediately after the event, and after a long inquiry a verdict of accidental death was returned. It is a source of great regret to all lovers of historical truth that Mickie's well-known ballad of Cumnor Hall, and Sir Walter Scott's still more famous novel of Kenilworth should serve to perpetuate historical falsehoods long since proved to be false."

Probable Execution of Four Siamese Princesses.

The Indian Statesman says: "There are rumors that three or four princesses of Siam and two servants have been accused of stealing gold chains, diamonds, and precious stones. The gold chains, diamonds, and other precious stones that were attached to the King's sword had been taken away, and imitation chains and stones had replaced them. These depredations, it is rumored, were made during the last year, but have only recently been discovered. Some say these accused of the theft have received ninety lashes each. The servants are to be executed and the princesses disposed of as the law provides for persons of their rank, if found really guilty of the theft. Others say the ladies of rank who are implicated are being tried, and it is not yet known what their punishment will be. If there is any basis for the rumors, and the princesses should be implicated and found guilty, their sentences will doubtless be death. The execution of princesses and princesses would be at some prominent temple. They would be bound and fastened in a bag, a block of charwood of triangular shape would be placed on the ground, and the fastened body turned inside downward so as to bring the neck below the chin on the triangular block. At a given signal, the first executioner, after raising his charwood cudgel, would strike the fatal blow on the back of the neck, and the three other executioners, similarly armed, would continue their blows upon the body until it entirely ceased to quiver. The bag containing the body would then be weighted and thrown into the river. This, it is stated, is the way in which His Royal Highness Krómé Luang Rak Kornaset was executed in 1849."

A Dreadful Scene of Murder.

Troppman has been imitated at Szent-Clary, a village in Lower Hungary. During the night of the 12th of October robbers broke into the house of an innkeeper, Francis Ortloch, and took possession of about $400 worth of money and chattels. Everything was packed up, and the robbers removing the bars, when one of the gang upset a chair, which awoke the landlord, who was sleeping in the next room with his wife. Mr. Ortloch sprang out, jumped out of bed, took a double-barreled gun and a lamp, and opened the door, through which he fired two shots at the brigands without hitting them. The miscreants then poured the unfortunate man, whom they nearly stabbed to death. Mrs. Ortloch, who had awakened by the noise, and hurried to the help of her husband, was murdered most cruelly. The robbers then got hold of the six children, tied and gagged them, and set the house on fire at the two corners, daring to fight with their booty. The ill-fated house was soon in a blaze, and when the first fire-engines appeared on the spot the mother and children had already been buried under the falling timbers. The landlord succeeded in escaping out of the fire, and has been able to give some important information, although there is little hope of his surviving. It is stated that the assassins were nine in number, with their faces blacked. The Police were actively searching for the murderers.

THE STATE DEPARTMENT.

Achievements in Adjusting Complaints Growing with France, England and Other Powers—Secretaries Seward and Fish—Results of Their Diplomatic Labors.

The duties of the Secretary of State, under the most favorable circumstances, are of an intricate and responsible nature. At that important [illegible] charged with the control of the Government, and from that time down to the final award of the International Court at Geneva, the duties of the Secretary of State were largely increased. Upon the solution and successful settlement of the questions involved, and yet to be determined, depended not only the continuance of peace abroad, but also the actual preservation of our national existence at home.

Providentially, President Lincoln secured for his chief officer of State, Hon. William H. Seward, a statesman eminently qualified for that responsible position, and who, today, (Oct. 14,) after a life-time devotion to the interests of his country, was borne by relatives and friends down into the tomb, supported in their bereavement by the sympathies of a nation deeply impressed with the great loss the country has sustained in his death.

War followed almost immediately after Mr. Seward entered upon the duties of his office. The Emperor of France lost very little time in commencing operations on the American Continent, under the impression that the American Union would soon fall to pieces. England connived at the building and outfitting of privateers for the destruction of American shipping and commerce. Mr. Seward met both cases promptly, and followed them up persistently. The French Emperor was notified, in a most friendly spirit, of the impropriety of sending and supporting with an army the Archduke Maximilian, in Mexico, while protests were promptly made to the British Government against building and equipping rebel privateers, and claims were made at the same time for damages resulting from their depredations. Mr. Seward's diplomatic correspondence with those Powers, made through our Ministers, breathed a friendly sentiment, and was always couched in conciliatory language. But he showed a firmness that could not be mistaken. Both France and England attempted to ignore the existence of any remaining strength in the American Government, and proposed to act independently of suggestions from the State Department at Washington. For example, the Emperor of France, through M. Drouyn de l'Huys, in reply to a remonstrance from Mr. Seward, through our Minister at Paris, replied, (Oct. 9, 1863,) that:

"The dangers of the Government of the Archduke would come principally from the United States, and that, besides, we showed ourselves satisfied with our situation. We felt certain with that Government, the sooner would France be ready to leave Mexico and the new Government to take care of itself, which France would, in any event, do as soon as it could; but that it would not leave the Archduke into difficulty and thus decorate the new Government was not settled. . . . The early acknowledgment of that Government by the United States would tend to abortion, or, perhaps, end all the troublesome complications of France in that country."

In a nearly similar spirit, in reply to Mr. Seward's repeated protests and claims for damages, Lord Russell, in a note to Minister Adams, (Sept. 14, 1863,) said:

"When the United States Government assume to hold the Government of Great Britain responsible for the captures made by vessels which may be fitted out for vessels of war in a foreign port, because such vessels were originally built in a British port, I have to observe that such a pretension is at variance, not only with the principles of International law, and with decisions of American Courts of the highest authority, and I have only, in conclusion, to express my hope that you may not be instructed again to put forward claims which Her Majesty's Government cannot admit to be founded on any grounds of law or justice."

Claims for damages under all circumstances, even when vessels were not only built but fitted out in British ports, and manned with British seamen, were likewise resented.

Mr. Seward felt, and he made it his first object to convince the Governments of France and England of the fact that the American Government was able and would maintain its rights. This he forcibly expressed in a previous dispatch (March 4, 1862,) to Mr. Dayton, at Paris, and ever afterward made it a standpoint in all diplomatic correspondence. He was indorsed by Congress and supported by the moral sentiment of the people not in rebellion.

Ere the close of Secretary Seward's administration of the affairs of State, the Emperor of France was forced to a hasty withdrawal of his army from Mexico, and the negotiations commenced and carried on by Mr. Seward with England, in reference to damages for the trespasses of English-built rebel privateers, have since resulted in a heavy award for damages to be paid to the United States by the British Government.

During the brief interval between Mr. Seward and Hon. Hamilton Fish in the State Department, Hon. E. B. Washburn represented that department of the Government. Mr. Fish succeeded him and still continues at the head of State affairs.

The duties of Secretary Fish were, from the first, not less intricate than those of Mr. Seward; but he has in every case carried his diplomatic problems to a successful solution. Among these was a series of important treaties with Austria-Hungary, Sweden, Ecuador, Belgium, Great Britain, Hesse Darmstadt, Mexico, the North German Union, and Wurtemberg, regulating the rights of persons who have emigrated from those dominions and have become naturalized citizens of the United States. These treaties provide in general that "subjects of these powers, respectively, who have become naturalized citizens of the United States, and who have resided within the United States for five years, shall be held as citizens of the United States, and shall be treated as such on returning their places of nativity. Formerly naturalized citizens of the United States, from these countries, were imprisoned or forced into the army on visiting their native places. Now they are secure from all interference against their liberty or person.

Commodore Perry, of the United States Navy, twenty years ago negotiated a commercial treaty with Japan; but it was not, as a dead letter until after the Republican Party assumed control of the Government. The subject of increased commerce with Japan led to negotiations with that country, which have been eminently successful in securing the extension of our commerce, while the Government of Japan holds the United States to be her most valuable ally.

China, too, has recognized the American Republic as her most trusty friend; and by a new treaty and the selection of an American citizen as her representative, in a foreign country, of close relations with the World, has proved that confidence.

But the latest and the greatest triumph of Secretary Fish, indorsed by the President, and supported by Congress, is the Treaty of Washington, together with the results of the Court of Arbitration at Geneva. In these results England and the United States have arrived at amicable relations, prospectively permanent, while the world has been taught that great International questions can be settled, and all disputes amicably adjusted, without recourse to demonstrations by armies and war fleets.

Thus through twelve years of delicate and difficult diplomacy the American Government is today in a position, and has the satisfaction of announcing to its forty millions of people, that the nation is in the full enjoyment of amicable relations abroad, and at peace with all the world.

A Bridegroom Commits Suicide on His Wedding-Day.

A Dublin telegram to the London Daily Telegraph, dated Oct. 26, says: "A shocking event took place yesterday morning. A marriage was to have place between Hubert de Burgh, a young barrister, and son of a Major in the army, and Miss Margaret Edgar, a daughter of a Magistrate. Both parties belonged to the best Dublin society. The marriage was to take place at St. Peter's Church, and at the hour fixed for its celebration the bridal party entered the church. The bridegroom did not make his appearance, and, after some delay, a messenger was dispatched to Mr. de Burgh's house. On reaching the house he found that the bridegroom had, after carefully dressing himself for the bridal, returned to his bedroom and cut his throat with a razor. On learning what had taken place the bridal party returned, as said, in distress and disarray, the bride being conveyed home in an insensible state. Mr. de Burgh's injuries are said to be mortal. Great efforts were made by the family to keep the occurrence secret. Even the police were not aware of it at an early hour this morning. The ceremony, it is said, had been arranged some years of age, and was recently called to the Bar, after a distinguished course in Trinity College. He is a man of considerable literary talents, and has contributed to the Dublin Magazine. After the bride party had waited an hour a message arrived that he had been taken suddenly ill, that version of the facts being given to spare the feelings of the bride, whose grief was intense. It appears that, after having dressed, De Burgh inflicted five gashes with a razor on his throat, and was found on a floor bleeding by a servant. There are various reports as to the cause, one being that some of his family disapproved of the match, and refused to be present at the wedding. This, however, is denied by his father, Major de Burgh, who can assign no cause for this melancholy act, which was the last thing to be expected from Mr. de Burgh's disposition and character."

SPREADING SMALL-PAX.

Curious Actions of a Commissioner of Emigration—His Office a Pest-House—Sixteen Thousand Patients a Gold Morning's Work—Shed in an Street—Effect on the Rusty Citizens.

From the Boston Advertiser, Nov. 4.

One of the greatest and most peculiar sensations which Charlestown has known for a long time occurred in that city yesterday. John M. Sylvester, a man employed by the city to fumigate houses where the small-pox exists and to take care of patients, was tending a man named Granville F. Hopkins, who was afflicted with the small pox in its worst form at No. 218 Main-street. Yesterday morning, before daylight, the man in a fit of insanity expressed a desire to take a walk. Sylvester thought the request not an unreasonable one, and wrapping him in a sheet, took him into the streets barefooted and nude, with the exception of the sheet covering, the time being 5 o'clock in the morning, and the air at nearly freezing point. The first place he entered was a market where the hostlers were about their morning work. To their excited imaginations the pair seemed a ghostly specter and an elephantine spirit, and they were naturally thrown into a great fright. Some hid in the hayloft and, not daring to leave their stalls, remained in them, while others ran out of the rear entrance of the market, at the top of their voices. They literally made the tour of three stables, affrighting all the men there employed in a similar manner. The weird pair promenaded through Main, Miller, and Lawrence streets, scaring all persons they met. Hitching on their chosen horse, they rode up Main-street, and drove off down a brass band, shouting, "Murder! Help!" Sleepers were roused by the disturbance, and windows were thrown up noisily to be as suddenly slammed down when the unearthly spectacle made its appearance. Special Policeman Michael Hogan was standing at the corner of Pupps and Lawrence streets, near the ancient burying-ground, when, in the darkness, he saw the strange couple about fifty feet from him. They approached him, and he turned to run, but mustering courage rallied and broke forth in coarse-textured speech: "Stand back! If you come another rod some near me, I'll save both your heads in!" A private watchman at Peter Chevalier's stable incontinently fled, crying, "A spook! a spook! spirits me!" Were last seen he was going toward Cambridge at the top of his speed. The worried man's "chaperon" was soon found by his friends, and he was taken back to the house, where he was placed in charge of a trustworthy man named Joseph Gould. At about 8 o'clock Sylvester stepped into the Police Station, where Chief of Police Swift and several officers were sitting. The affrighted messenger rushed into the Station, and as the Sergeant at mode his appearance there, was a vacanc

Money was in good demand among the Brokers, and the stiff rates of 7 ₱ cent. Currency to 7 ₱ cent. Gold Interest partially influenced the Stock market after the early Board.

There was a good average business done at the Stock Exchange today, as will be seen from the official list of sales. The prices at the outset were steady, and on some of the Stocks disposed to firmness, but after 1 o'clock there was apparent weakness in the confidence of speculators, and for an hour or two the influence was quite conspicuous, with a partial decline of 1@2 ₱ cent. on the Railroads. Near the close of the day the general market improved, and left off as follows, as compared with Monday night previous to Election Day:

THE NEW-YORK TIMES,
New-York City.

An attempt was undoubtedly made yesterday by the Tammany Police Commissioners to counsin LAWRENCE and DONOHUE—the first as Mayor, the second as District-Attorney. We set our reporters to watch the process, and it may be that the knowledge of the conspiracy having gained the public ear, deterred MANIERRE and BOSWORTH from prosecuting it any further. These men must be blind as owls in sunlight not to see that the public will not stand any more of these outrages upon the ballot. If MANIERRE and BOSWORTH defrauded Mr. HAVEMEYER of his just vote, the City would soon be too hot to hold them. The public have risen in two successive years to extinguish Tammany frauds. They are not going to allow the Police Commissioners to perpetuate the system now. The inspectors of districts have been in consultation with Commissioner DAVENPORT, and any frauds which may be attempted will assuredly be detected. MANIERRE and BOSWORTH may rest assured that the days of cheating are over. Mr. HAVEMEYER and Mr. PURDY are undoubtedly elected, and it will go very hard with MANIERRE and his confederates if they try to swindle the public at the eleventh hour. If they cannot understand the meaning of the popular uprising against Tammany, the public will soon open their eyes.

The influence of the Herald in politics ought by this time to be pretty accurately estimated, both by "laymen" and politicians. It supported Tammany, and was signally beaten. It supported GREELEY as long as it decently could, and has been beaten. It called for the election of LAWRENCE, and LAWRENCE is defeated. It particularly denounced the re-election of GUNNING S. BEDFORD as City Judge, and BEDFORD is literally nowhere in the race. It defended HALL—and HALL is in a position which few of us would like to occupy. The Herald, and the class which it represents, are "effete powers" in this community. They must hereafter take a back seat. We advise the Herald to confine its attentions henceforth to the Imâm of Muscat. It is no good nearer home.

Mr. HAVEMEYER wisely abstains from pledging himself to any definite policy in regard to the reorganization of the City Government. He is quite alive to the fact that the elevation of the standard of efficiency and trustworthiness in local business must be a question of time. Mr. HAVEMEYER may be trusted to set about the work of administrative reform, calmly and resolutely, troubling himself very little about the "claims" of this or that set of politicians, and solely desirous to serve the interests of the people at large. Local reformers will, in due time, demand from the Legislature sundry important modifications of the existing charter. Meanwhile, there are checks enough in the charter of 1870, which, rightly administered, will go far to bring the various executive departments of the City back to the régime of strict economy and accountability. We trust, with this view, that Judge BARRETT'S recent decision on the Fire Commissioners' case will be sustained by the Judges of the General Term, before whom it has been taken. This would have the effect of overthrowing the vicious system of independent financial officers, who have been created without warrant of law, in various City Departments. The Controller's office exists for the purpose of maintaining a check upon the details of the expenditures of the Departments. To allow executive officials to pay away hundreds of thousands of public money simply on the audit of their own "Treasurer," is equivalent to giving them control of a corruption fund which can be used in the Legislature or elsewhere, for their personal interest.

The result in Kings County may be briefly summed up as follows: The City of Brooklyn has cast 66,000 votes on the Presidential ticket, on which GRANT has a majority of 4,716. SEYMOUR'S majority in 1868 was 11,839, and the Republican gain on the Presidential vote thus 6,823. With a few election districts still to be heard from, Brooklyn gives DIX a majority of 1,047, showing that KERNAN ran 3,769 votes behind GREELEY, and showing a Republican gain, as compared with HOFFMAN'S majority in 1868, of 10,886. The Republicans have elected WILLIAMS, their candidate for Sheriff, by a majority of 3,181; have carried two Congressional districts, and have sent five Republicans, out of the nine members of the county delegation, to the Assembly. The King ticket for Commissioner of Charities has been elected by a slender majority, but the Republicans have gained two representatives in the Board of Aldermen. The Board, as it will be constituted in 1873, stands nine Republicans and two Independent Democrats, against eleven Ring Democrats. Under this equal division we may expect to see some decided check given to the plundering schemes of "Boss" McLAUGHLIN and his satellites. The result of this election clearly proves that the Republican Party of Brooklyn can, by well-directed energy and the maintenance of internal harmony, succeed in making Brooklyn what it ought to be—a Republican city.

GUNNING S. BEDFORD has been defeated by such a majority as leaves no room for misapprehension about the public verdict upon the base expedients with which he appropriately closed a judicial career equally destitute of dignity, ability, and principle. While no man can be better spared from the local bench than Judge BEDFORD, no man will be more sincerely welcomed back to it than JOSIAH SUTHERLAND. Apprehensions as to the fair trial of the Ring indictments which may be prosecuted in the Court of General Sessions, will cease, now that the three Judges, before one or other of whom they must come, are Recorder HACKETT, Judge DALY, and Judge SUTHERLAND.

LYMAN TRUMBULL and FRANCIS P. BLAIR, Jr., disappear with others whom the great victory has swept out of American politics. The Legislatures of Illinois and Missouri being largely Republican, these two selfish agitators, who sought to use both political parties, and disturbed the country in order to gratify their personal grudges and their insatiable greed for office, will make their exit from public life together on the 4th of March next. No incident of that day will be more pleasant than the spectacle of these two bankrupt politicians leaving the Senate, with the knowledge that they can never enter it again. By their retirement they will have done far more for the purification of the public service than they have accomplished throughout their entire public career.

Some Useful Lessons.

Some very valuable lessons have been taught, and still more valuable results accomplished, by the elections on Tuesday, and we hope they will not be lost sight of, even amidst the jaded feelings to which a long contest has naturally given rise.

So far as regards our own great City, this important fact has been shown—that the rule of one class, and that the most ignorant class in the community, is over. The ignorant, unthinking, bigoted hordes which Tammany brought up to its support year after year are hopelessly scattered. Americans—truly so-called—are now determined to have some share in the government of this City, and will no longer leave it to be tyrannized over by our esteemed friends from the Emerald Isle. This is going to be an American City once more—not simply a larger kind of Dublin. The iron rod of our "oppressed" friend is broken.

Again—the rule of thieves is over. We said last year, after the elections, that the honest and respectable people had for the first time in some years found out their power, and would henceforth use it. Thousands of them remained away from the polls formerly, because they thought it was "of no use" to vote for the mere purpose of being counted out. We struggled against the apathy arising from that feeling in 1869, in 1870, again in 1871, and again this year. It was the most formidable enemy against which we had to combat. We dreaded it a good deal more than Tammany. At last the people were prevailed upon to try the effect of voting just once more. The result was that Tammany went down before them like a house of cards. This year the victory is even more signal. And now, will the people ever relapse into their old indifference, for which they have paid so dearly? We hope and believe not. They are again masters of their own City—will they allow a mongrel herd, led by "Bosses" and "Peters" and buffoons to seize it once more, and take millions from its exchequer? The only way to prevent such a result is to be vigilant all the year round—not simply on election days. Watch your servants closely. See that they do their duty. Believe no whitewashing reports of "respectable citizens." We shall certainly do all that we can to assist the public in exercising a sharp supervision over their own affairs. The candidates who have been elected received our support simply because we believed them to be the best men in the field. When they fail to do their duty, there is nothing to prevent us from saying so.

Lastly, the result of this election, locally and nationally, shows that we may always safely trust the people to do what is right. The fatal error of most politicians and journalists is that they do not trust the people enough. In abiding by that trust, we found our only encouragement for many weary months, when we were opposing Tammany, amid the scurrilous abuse of almost all our contemporaries. We believed in the people—and that belief is the only secret which there is about our "policy." Deal honestly with the public, tell them the truth—act toward them as a banking-house or commercial firm will act toward its customers—and the public will stand by you, and justify your confidence in it. This is the plain doctrine which we have always entertained; and when our amiable contemporaries decry our humble exertions, on account of our motives, or talk of "bargains" with this politician or that—we are content to leave our cause with the public, for we may honestly say that we have faithfully and unflinchingly defended theirs.

A Review of the World.

The Republican victory appeared almost incredible yesterday morning. This morning it is known to be much greater than we then ventured to hope. The thirty States which we announced yesterday as having given their electoral votes to Gen. GRANT are now still more certain to have done so, while the majorities are greatly increased. The one hundred thousand in Pennsylvania is now known to be nearer 125,000, a majority more overwhelming than any Presidential candidate ever before received in any State. GRANT'S total popular majority on present returns is not less than 700,000, and still increasing.

Our own gallant State—the birth-place of the coalition—rolls more than fifty thousand majority on its grave. Of the States that went into the rebellion, which Mr. GREELEY expected to carry, and declared yesterday that he had carried—excepting only the Carolinas—only one, Georgia, declares for him. Of the other former slave States, he can count certainly only on three, Kentucky, Maryland, and Tennessee, and these by very small majorities. Missouri is still uncertain, and Texas votes for two days more. Four States, then, with forty-three votes, with a possibility of two more with twenty-three votes, are all that this vaunted coalition can show for its long labors and great boasting.

In Congress we have very nearly, if not quite a two-thirds majority. To this New-York contributes twenty-five Republicans to eight Democrats—our present delegation being fifteen Republicans to sixteen Democrats.

New-Jersey gives twelve thousand majority for GRANT, rivalling many of her larger sisters.

New-York elects DIX by a majority fully up to Gen. GRANT'S, if not beyond it—certainly exceeding it in these two cities, which fail to respond to KERNAN'S nomination, though it was made with the avowed purpose of suiting their lowest classes. Our Assembly is also strongly Republican. The latest returns give the composition of the House as follows: Republicans, 88; Democrats, 38; Independent, 1; Husted, 1.

Men Who Have Done Well.

Among the men to whom the magnificent triumph of GRANT and DIX in this State may be justly, in great part, credited, is Senator CONKLING. He has, it may fairly be said, done more work, and done it better, than any one else. He began early and labored incessantly, at times to the serious danger of his health, and his influence has been very great. His speeches have not only been eloquent, but they have been convincing beyond any made in this State during the canvass. We know from personal observation very many who have been strongly aroused by his arguments, and there have been thousands similarly influenced all through the State.

Besides Senator CONKLING, we should call attention to the industrious, zealous Chairman of the State Central Committee, Mr. A. B. CORNELL. His efforts have been incessant, and conducted with great discretion and good sense.

Nor should we omit Commissioner DAVENPORT, who has been rewarded for his services by the most "Liberal" abuse. But he can have the satisfaction of knowing that if it had not been for his untiring exertions, no honest vote would have been approximately possible in this City. That is something which the experience of Tammany frauds should make us appreciate.

Greeley's Valedictory to His Followers.

Democrats who have taken so much delight in reading the soft things that have been printed about them in the Tribune, during the last five months, and who, in their gushing thankfulness, have not only brought themselves to the sticking-point of supporting GREELEY for the Presidency, but have come forward liberally with their subscriptions to save his paper from bankruptcy, will be taken somewhat aback by the leading article in yesterday's Tribune, in which the philosopher announces the result of their labors. Before the smoke of the battle had cleared away sufficiently to enable him to ascertain anything beyond the fact that he was badly beaten, and could never be President, we find the petulant and passionate GREELEY rushing back to his old tripod in the almost defunct Tribune establishment, and denouncing the whole army of his followers as a pack of dirty, venal, cowardly, unprincipled scamps. Opening his tirade of abuse with the truthful, but needless and inopportune, declaration that "there is scarcely a parallel to the completeness of the rout and triumph" which have resulted from their misbehavior, he goes on to show how the battle has been lost and the leader brought into disgrace by the sordid, mercenary, and pusillanimous character of his troops. "The Liberal movement," he exclaims, "was at one time formidable, and had a prospect of success;" but the venal scamps on whom he relied to achieve success scented the money-bags of the enemy afar off, and forthwith deserted in droves to the other side. Commencing with the first skirmishes of the campaign, "thousands of voters," he says, "in North Carolina, Vermont, and Maine were convinced by money that they might better vote the Administration than the Liberal ticket, and that, if they could not so vote, it was their interest to stay at home on election day and not vote at all. Thus the Liberal Republican strength in those States was nearly neutralized by Democrats who wouldn't act even when they could get five dollars to twenty dollars each for not acting it." This scandalous example of the hirelings of Vermont, Maine, and North Carolina was imitated on a still larger scale in Pennsylvania, where the Tribune boasts of a weekly circulation of 21,246. "There was nothing purchaseable in the Keystone State," avers Mr. GREELEY, "that was not bought, whether of voters, electioneerers, or inspectors and canvassers. Thousands who had been perspiring with zeal for the Liberal cause silently dropped into the swelling vermin." In a word, Mr. GREELEY accounts for his defeat by declaring that his followers, and particularly the Democrats, whether captains or privates, were bought up, mangy and in companies, regiments and battalions, like so many cattle.

Well, it may have been so; we are not prepared to dispute it. In fact, we have all along said that they were a vile set of scallywags, totally destitute of principle, mere soldiers of fortune, looking for a chance to market themselves at the highest price. If they hadn't been of this character they never would have joined GREELEY'S filibusters in the first place. It is not for us to defend them; but we will say that the rank and file of the Liberal army have been no worse than their leader; in fact they are to be praised for the fidelity with which they have followed his example. He sold out his principles and the record of his whole life for the glittering prize of the Presidency, which he fancied he saw in the distance; why should not they sell out for a little ready cash to save them from starving? No army could endure the fatigues of a campaign on a diet of "boiled crow," and no General who had a proper regard for his troops would ask them to do it. Those 21,246 subscribers to the Tribune in Pennsylvania, for instance. What lesson could they have imbibed from a perusal of that journal for the last twelve months, except that of bargain and sale—of treason to principle and desertion of party for a price? They saw their leader repudiating all his past teachings and selling himself to Democrats and secessionists; why should they not sell him when they had a chance? There is no good reason why they should not, and we have no doubt they did it. Indeed, the 21,246 Pennsylvania subscribers to the Weekly Tribune just about make up the number that are charged by GREELEY with selling out at the October election in that State. There can be no doubt in the mind of any reasonable man that the traitors and the Tribune subscribers were the self-same parties.

How ineffably mean, therefore, it is in Mr. GREELEY to denounce and abuse his disciples for doing the same thing that he did himself. In the same issue of the Tribune in which he insults and vilifies his late followers, he prints a laudatory article about himself, in which he has the audacity to declare that "he has sacrificed no principle; he has in no way compromised his self-respect, or used doubtful utterances to win votes." There is but one interpretation that can be given to this language which would lift it from the category of the most stupendous falsehoods ever put in type; and that is that Mr. GREELEY never had any principles to sacrifice, any self-respect to compromise, or any capacity of uttering his real thoughts. The first two propositions, in view of his recent conduct, appear quite plausible; as to the last, we fear that his late Democratic supporters will have occasion in the future, as they have had in the past, to wish rather than to believe that it were true.

"The World is All a Flocking Show."

If a journal that has been on both sides of all questions is proof against the stings of defeat, profound satisfaction ought to reign in the breasts of the wise men who conduct the New-York World. Tammany is smashed, and if the World defended Tammany it also waged against it a "war to the knife." Mr. GREELEY is wiped out, and if this "philosophic" newspaper exhausted its polysyllables to prove that he ought to be elected, it also denounced his claims as a candidate in terms as forcible as it could command. The Bourbons have torn the Democratic Party to pieces, and if the World labored to convince them that their duty lay in abandoning their convictions, it also gave them the very best reasons for sticking to them, though the party was ruined. The Liberal Republicans have made as humiliating a fiasco as a hungry crowd of short-sighted schemers ever made in the pretended service of a good cause, and if the World has joined hands with them in their hypocritical course for the last five months, it also exposed before that the fact that they could neither succeed, nor deserved success. If mortification is the feeling with which it should regard one-half of what it has done, who shall deny it the cheap consolation of reflecting that the other and opposite half has been vindicated?

But it cannot expect the public generally to share its sentiments in this matter. When it devotes a whole editorial page to apologizing for its course, it could hardly suppose that the public would not be of very much the same mind after reading it—if it was read—as before. Such an elaborate explanation must necessarily involve so many confessions and contradictions as to explain nothing. It declares "it has always felt that the best part of its work as a public journal, and an organ of Democratic opinion, consisted in enlightening and educating the public sentiment of the party during the intervals between the great quadrennial contests for the control of the Federal Government;" but it owns that when the contest came, all its fine "educational" writing was treated by its party, and acknowledged by itself, as "obstructive impertinence." It makes much of the opportunities of its editor, who "habitually sees, on social or other occasions, the cleverest men among his contemporaries, and converses with them when they are most disposed to the openness and freedom which is protected by the confidence which prevails in the intercourse of gentlemen;" but it confesses that when these "cleverest men" came to act, he could not prevent them from accepting "a candidate whose whole past history represented everything which was hostile to Democratic ideas of the philosophy, functions and limitations of government." Such an "inexplicable and astounding" failure of an "able editor" of an "important journal published in a metropolis," requires an explanation. He of the World finds it "in the fact that his party did not take his advice on a previous occasion, when he was waging a 'war to the knife' on Tammany. But why should they have taken advice which the virtuous adviser, for reasons undoubtedly satisfactory to any mind capable of estimating the value of dollars and cents, stopped giving just at the time when it was most pertinent? Ah, sighs the World, our voice was then 'like that of one crying in the wilderness.' Not at all, dear World; it was like that of one crying in the auction room, and the men whose bid silenced it were not very likely to think it worth any more than they paid to hush it.

"The Tammany frauds," now says the pious and astute World, "were the source of all our woes." But they were not. The source of all your woes was the way the Tammany frauds were treated by you. You first utterly denied them; then you said we had forged the proofs of them; then you said we were only trying to black-mail the authors of them; then you said it was not the Ring who committed them, but the old Board of Supervisors, which the virtuous Ring had "reformed" out of existence; then you declared that everybody knew them before, and they were of no consequence, and finally, when, at the eleventh hour, the shrewd but tardy TILDEN rushed in to rescue the remains of a party shattered by the terrible villainy of its leaders, you raised your gentle voice to convince the people that the Democratic Party was the only party capable of dealing with Tammany, and begged them to give it a chance to show how it could destroy the vast structure of fraud it had itself builded.

The people would not do it. They had no patience with such patent, shameless, impotent humbug. They have had none since, and have none now. They refused to trust the party which, as a party, showed no courage, no sense of honor, no decent consciousness of the deep stains on its record; but which floundered from one trick to another, from one deceit to another, until it crowned its folly and its wickedness with "the abject and humiliating nomination" of HORACE GREELEY. Then the party went under forever, and the World went under with it.

Cruelty to Street-Car Passengers.

Public attention having lately been called, in a very public manner, to the subject of the right kind of treatment for the quadrupeds that draw the street-cars, a few words will not be out of place in regard to the usage of the bipeds that ride in them.

Cruelty to dumb beasts is a very bad thing. Apart from the suffering inflicted on the brutes themselves, the habit is one which is exceedingly apt to be carried out in reference to the human race. This is one of the points most strongly urged by those who are active in the prevention of cruelty to animals, and is unquestionably an exceedingly important consideration. But we marvel that they have so much overlooked the practical illustration of this particular point afforded by many of our street-cars. The similarity between the case of overworked horses on their last trip for the day, and that of weary men and women, who, having just finished a day of toil, are returning home, partly standing on the floor of a crowded car, partly held up by being tightly wedged in among the other passengers, and partly hanging by a strap from the roof, is so obvious and striking that we should have imagined it would at once have attracted the notice of any one whose attention had in the slightest degree been given to the subject. Nothing could more vividly show the manner in which inhumanity to the lower animals hardens the heart in reference to the sufferings of our own species than the spectacle, so often and so forcibly, in the latter part of the afternoon, brought to our notice, of two tired and melancholy-looking four-legged creatures trotting sadly along in front of a conveyance, inside of which, in addition to the number the vehicle was built to accommodate, are twenty or thirty human beings unable to obtain a seat, and repeating the experiment, which previous trials ought to have convinced them must necessarily be unsuccessful, of endeavoring to get a little rest by standing first on one foot, then on the other, and, finding that neither did any good, hanging awhile by the hands to a strap overhead, to see whether that afforded any relief.

To those of our readers whose business is not such as to involve any great amount of physical exertion, it may seem a mere trifle to be obliged to stand up in a car for half or three quarters of an hour. But to a laboring man, who, except from 12 to 1 o'clock, has been hard at work since early in the morning, or to a clerk in a store, who, all but a few minutes spent in stuffing down the meal which constituted his substitute for a dinner, has been on his feet from the time the store was opened—the difference between sitting and standing for the thirty or forty-five minutes in which he is riding toward home is a thing of no inconsiderable moment. If he had to stand in the car only once a month or once a week, it would not be so bad. But when it comes to doing it on an average at least every alternate afternoon, especially after having been compelled to do the same thing in going to his work in the morning, the addition to his daily labor thus occasioned is no trifle. And it should also be recollected that there are a great many such men who are in poor health, and whose regular work in itself more than they can perform without a good deal of discomfort, or perhaps even severe pain. There are numbers of persons, for instance, afflicted with rheumatism, or neuralgia, or with weak lungs, who are obliged to earn their own living, and to whom the necessity for standing half an hour or more at the close of their daily toil, in a crowded vehicle is productive of no slight degree of suffering.

We are entirely unable to see why those lines which are so packed going down in the morning and up in the evening, cannot make arrangements to have an extra number of cars running at the time when travel is greatest. The interest on the cost of the additional horse would not be a very serious consideration, and we should suppose that men might be obtained without difficulty to serve as conductors and drivers a couple of hours at each end of the day. At any rate, it would seem to be within the range of human ingenuity to devise, for the alleviation of so much discomfort, and not unfrequently decided suffering as is occasioned by the crowded condition of the cars on many lines at certain hours, some remedy which would not inordinately tax the resources of the companies.

A Lesson for New-Jersey Republicans.

The victory of honesty over corruption, which has just been achieved in New-Jersey, should be esteemed a valuable lesson by the Republicans of that State. During several years past, all their failures have been attributable to lack of foresight and extreme laziness. The men who were looked up to as leaders have endeavored, by every means in their power, to shirk responsibility. The immediate effect of such a course was to give an opportunity for advancement to men who could afford to spend a trifle of money for the furtherance of ambitious schemes. The masses of the people, very properly, were disgusted, and although Republican at heart—as has now been shown—went with the side that gave evidence of life and vigor, if not of purity. The contest for Governor in 1871 was a sufficient illustration of what lukewarmness and want of principle can do. The Democrats knew that they had nothing to put into the scales but the personal popularity of a man whose character was above reproach; but they resolved to make a bold dash for success, and they attained it. On the other hand, the Republicans took for their candidate a man who, although he had gained wealth by hard industry, was, in many respects, objectionable. The working classes, whether rightly or wrongly, imagined that he had not been a good employer, and, as a consequence, believed that he would not, if elected, be a just Governor. The Democrats made the most of this feeling by the circulation of slanders of the very vilest nature. Indeed, to such an extent were these tactics employed, that Mr. WALSH'S defeat became a rout, and gave to the Democracy a new lease of life. The minor offices, it is true, were to some extent filled by Republicans, but the prestige of the party was destroyed, and the spirit, poor as it was, which had heretofore sustained it was utterly crushed. To this cause alone we have been indebted for the "sorcheadism" that brought into national prominence men like "JIMMY" SCOVEL, and that gave hope to the "Liberal-Democratic" coalition down to the last hour of the struggle.

COCHRANE, ALLEN & Co. little knew the kind of material of which Jersey politicians are composed, and, having based their calculations upon the success of JOEL PARKER in 1871, and the desertions from the Republican Party that followed, thought they saw a clear road to victory for Mr. GREELEY.

It is but right to say that much of the time of the campaign was consumed in the effort of Democrats to saddle all the work upon the "sorehead" Republicans. How far they succeeded in this game is shown by the result. The loyal Republicans, as they can now see, have reason to rejoice that those whose exertions had mainly conduced to their defeat in former elections, had gone out from their ranks, leaving them to fight their own battle. The contaminating influence of these traitors swept like an epidemic through the camps of the enemy, and made the Republicans proper a unit of strength. In the future, the leaders of the Republican Party in New-Jersey must continue to be animated by the vigor which has characterized their actions during the past few weeks. They must keep clear of the rocks upon which they have so often drifted; they must have nothing to do with "bargains" or "sales"; and above all things, they must see to it that for local as well as State offices, none but the best men are put forward. By a strict adherence to this course, a Republican can be elected to succeed JOEL PARKER, and a long lease of honest government insured.

Public Entertainments—The Winter Season at the Theatres.

A false and pernicious notion has of late been suffered to gain ground to the effect that the public Press is bound to bespatter with indiscriminate praise every performer or manager who chooses to appeal for it. The propriety of bestowing this praise is suggested to the Press in unmistakable ways, and the impropriety of withholding it is also conveyed by divers little tricks and expedients. Among these may be mentioned the absurd device of printing house-bills in a quasi-journalistic form, wherein, as a sort of dessert to the solid fare of the cast of the play, a lot of fulsome puffs of managers and artists are paraded, garnished with coarse babble about would-be fashionables and obscure scribblers. The stuff is not a bit more respectable, or worthy of credence, than the home-made panegyrics of quack medicines, but, like them, is put forth on the chance of gulling a certain proportion of ignorant people, and so entrapping their money and applause. Of course, no decent journalist lends himself to this sort of work, which plainly discredits journalism in general, and art criticism in particular. The practice, notwithstanding, of putting forth these ridiculous sheets has been pushed to offensive excess, and ought, if only because it is so disparaging to the intelligence of the public, to be put a stop to. The managers should know that what the people want to read is not silly puffery of themselves and their players, with underbred "society" twaddle, like the sweet after a bolus, to make it go down; but, if anything besides the bill of the play—and we see no need for anything else—that which is at least not an insult to the good sense of every educated person who comes into their houses.

A more important consideration, and one which may usefully be dwelt upon, is the need for striving to give a more intellectual character to what is presented on the stage. The public are daily requested by the managers here and there to thank the managers for. The Latin proverb says that "in battles the eye is first overpowered," and our theatrical caterers have carried the application of this maxim to their own work considerably too far. The public have brains as well as eyes, and like the former to be respected as well as the latter. It is all very well to put handsome furniture, and costly dresses, and cleverly-painted scenery on the stage. Such work is creditable in proportion to its taste and its enterprise, as a matter of course. But something more is needed, and that is proper culture and intelligence on the part of the performers, and in the selection of the plays performed. If old comedies are attempted, the public have a right to expect to see something like ladies and gentlemen in them, who are capable of entering into and depicting the wit, the social elegance, and the peculiar characteristics of the age represented. Failing this, as Mr. RUSKIN would say, the performance comes short of that "felicitous fulfilment of function," which it is the province of the theatre to illustrate. We are sometimes told that actors are not to be had now who are equal to, or fitted for, this kind of thing, which is partly true, no doubt, but which, if true, does not condone the defect; since, in that case, the plays which so dismally expose the defect should be carefully avoided. It is far better to do well what lies within our means than to fall short through over-ambition, and bad work is ever sure to follow when the shoemaker fails to stick to his last.

It is one good result of spirited rivalry, that managers are forced by it to put their best foot foremost, and this we may look for in the Winter campaign. There will soon be, in addition to those already in the field, two new theatres. Mr. FECHTER'S "Lyceum" in Fourteenth-street is practically ready to open, and the new Niblo's soon will be. Both these theatres will be fine additions—in some respects unique ones—to the list of Metropolitan theatres; the one making a specialty, we suppose, of refined French melo-drama, and the other of gorgeous spectacle. On the 11th of November that favorite comedian, Mr. SOTHERN, is to open at Wallack's in Lord Dundreary—the charming play of "Pygmalion and Galatea" holding the boards until that time—and hopes to bring out a series of new dramas during the Winter. Soon, too, we shall have Shakespearean tragedy again at Booth's, since, at the end of the excellent engagement of Mr. and Mrs. BOUCICAULT, Miss NEILSON, a young actress from over-sea, of whom report speaks highly, is to appear as Juliet. At the Grand Opera-house Mr. DALY is hard at work on a novelty which will succeed "King Carrot," while at the Fifth-avenue the same industrious manager has several pieces in rehearsal to keep up the fire of variety and sensation. Meanwhile, the Olympic, after its gay and profitable season of opera bouffe, is to be followed by the LYDIA THOMPSON company, on Nov. 11, so that those who like burlesque can enjoy it to the full, since Wood's Museum is offering to its many and steadfast supporters a like style of entertainment.

Thus it seems we shall soon have nine theatres open, exclusive of the peculiar houses on the east side—theatres which undertake to bring our plays, in their several degrees, in a careful and finished manner. All of these, no doubt, may depend on public support; but the measure and permanence of that support will depend on the respect with which they treat their patrons, and the conscientiousness, in general, with which they deal with their art. New-York is yearly becoming more fastidious and more discerning in these matters, and plays of the best attainable sort, done in the best possible way, can alone be depended upon to retain, for any length of time, genuine approval and remunerative patronage.

The Times and Election News.

It would be ungracious to our numerous friends, whose congratulations have literally poured in on us from every quarter, if we did not acknowledge their cordial appreciation of our efforts to furnish all the news possible concerning the campaign and its results. It is a pleasure to us that we have been able during a long and confused canvass, to trace the progress of public opinion with unusual accuracy. Our correspondence from the States which successively became fields of action—from New-Hampshire in the Spring, then from Connecticut, then from North Carolina, then from Maine and Vermont, then from Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana—kept our readers informed of the candid opinions of trained observers, in a way which we know was regarded as both interesting and valuable. Not the least contribution to the formation of that harmonious public opinion expressed on Tuesday was the series of letters from the various parts of the Union, informing the people in all the States of the condition of the canvass at points of special importance.

Yesterday morning we were able to give to our readers more trustworthy information concerning the main features, and many of the details of the results of the election, than any paper has ever before done on the morning after election. We have no desire to boast, but we ask our readers to compare our paper with any other they may choose, and judge for themselves.

We need only say that the TIMES will continue to apply to all subjects of current interest the same thoroughness in collecting and presenting news as it has shown with reference to political affairs.

DELAWARE.

Eli R. Saunders, Republican, is elected Sheriff in Sussex County. James R. Lofland, Republican, for Congress, ran behind his ticket in New-Castle, where his majority is 600.

SCENES IN HUNGARY.

A Remarkable Conservative.

From Our Own Correspondent.

KLAUSENBURG, TRANSYLVANIA, Thursday, Aug. 8, 1872.

On the following morning of my visit at the Baron's they kindly put me in charge of the clergyman of the parish and an old servant, to see the village. The cottages are all wicker-work or earth covered with plaster, and colored white. They are often built directly on the street, or in a little yard. We visited first a Magyar's house. The door opened right into a little kitchen with a huge earthen oven. The cooking fire, however, was very small and in a separate compartment, fuel being very scarce and dear here. On one side of the kitchen was the sitting-room with very clean floors, and neat beds in each corner, piled up with comforters and blankets. There were a few little pictures on the walls, and long rows of a peculiar jug of various sizes hung from the ceiling. These colored porcelain jugs have come down through many generations. I attempted to buy one, but they would not sell them, though they finally gave me one. The room the other side of the kitchen was also a bedroom, though not so well kept. Several generations slept here in the same rooms, and two or three families. This over-crowding is universal in the agricultural districts of all parts of Hungary. One landlord told me that he built or taxes only for single families on his estat and the tenants did not like it, "it was too lonely," and as soon as he was absent they crowded two families into one room. All his ventilators, which he had carefully constructed, they stopped up, and kept the air as close and fetid as it was possible to do. One result of this over-crowding and over-heating is great liability to consumption among the peasants.

The people, in these visits, met us very cordially and hospitably. There was no sidewalk in the village, and the whole must be fearfully muddy and dirty in bad weather. Not a tree was planted on any road or walk.

We visited next a Wallach cottage. The arrangement of rooms was precisely the same. There was the same row of little jugs hanging from the ceiling, though some of these had more of the Roman urn character, and may show the Wallach's inherited taste; the cleanliness and comfort, however, were inferior. The floors were earthen instead of stone or wood, and the smoke escaped from a hole in the roof. Without, in the yard, were the huge stacks of grain and hay peculiar to the Wallach farms. Each cottage was protected by a pack of snarling dogs. Walking through the village, we came in the outskirts on the Gypsy portion, and here our visit made a great sensation. The first cottage we entered contained a dark woman and three children from nine to fourteen years, black as negroes, and perfectly naked. The hovel was very bare and dirty, and there seemed hardly any bedding or furniture. The women and the men outside were in great consternation, fearing that it was some new laying of taxes. A crowd of wild-looking, swarthy men followed us a long distance, watching our movements. The pastor says that some are Protestants; that they will take any religion if it will bring them in a few kreutzers, and that they do not steal much from the "Hall," but they will do so from other sources. The Baron says they are invaluable for odd services, such as little jobs about a house. They must always have food, however, with wages, as they have not skill enough to buy, or foresight to lay up. Now and then one will read and write well. In the village, the clergyman says, out of several hundred, not more than ten can read and write well, and fifty perhaps passably, but there are, notwithstanding, over a hundred voters—all on the "right" party, because, probably, of the influence of the nobleman's family. The clergyman himself is a curate, supported by the Baron. He seemed a man but little superior to his parishioners.

In the whole village there was but one stone house, belonging to an English butler of the Count B—.

BREAKFAST TALK.

The Baron has the habit of riding over his estate before breakfast, so that we have a later and heartier meal than is customary here. Broiled chicken and coffee, with wine, were served at 9, and we had a long conversation over the meal.

"How are you getting out of the nationality difficulty?" I asked.

"To be frank with you, Herr B.," he replied, "if we acted according to the modern principles of progress and justice, we should be obliged to give every race in Hungary precisely the same privileges as ourselves; but we cannot do this and exist as a nation. Take those Wallachs you saw: Not three in a hundred can read or write. If we gave them universal suffrage, we should be overborne by an ignorant population. If we required their dialect, and the Servian, and the Saxon, to be spoken in our Courts or Parliament, we should have a polyglot Assembly, and should never accomplish anything. All would be confusion. We hold that we, the Magyars, are the best fitted to govern the country, and we mean to govern it justly, but still as a race. When it is a Wallach country, we don't want to stay here. We give the Wallach the suffrage, but on a low census—some eight guilden ($4) tax annually. Surely that is liberal enough. We allow him, in a strong Wallach country, to have his law protocols in his own language; but the proceedings there and in Parliament must be in Hungarian. If we do not have a national language, we go to the bottom—Grunde gehen! We mean to do fairly and rightly, but we Hungarians must govern Hungary, just as you English-Americans must have a national language and rule all races in America. Nicht wahr?"

"But do not the Wallachs have the same rights with the Magyars now?" I asked.

"Freilich! Certainly," he answered, "the same census (tax) applies to both races. But, under that, many ignorant persons become voters."

"But, Herr Baron, why did you not establish an intelligent test? Then you would have had no trouble."

"Ach lieber Herr! The Left would never agree to that! We have set sail in this course, and we cannot go back. As I said, we cannot justify ourselves on abstract principles of justice; but we know Hungary would be worth nothing if Hungarians did not govern it. We must in some way exclude this rabble from power."

"What effect has the doing away of the nobarial rights (serfdom) had on the people?"

"I think some of the peasants, finding they got land so easily by a stroke of law—property which they thought once belonged to others—have begun to hope that other rights of property will be unsettled, and that they shall yet secure more of our land. Still, on the whole, we are stronger for it. If we can show the nation that their material interests are furthered by a conservative Government, we are safe. I lost very heavily in my claims for labor, but I have had a compensation. My land is worth more."

On inquiry I found that this gentleman possessed some six thousand acres in this neighborhood, and, in various localities, twenty different vineyards. The value of his land had increased fivefold in the last twenty years, showing the wonderful effect of railroads. He complained much, as all the landlords do, of the rate of wages, without the smallest reason. They only averaged in the village seventy kreutzers (thirty-five cents) a day, and house female servants only received from $1 50 to $2 per month. The wages on the railroad, however, were higher, from sixty cents to $1 25 per diem. With these wages he was getting two gulden ($1) a bushel for his Indian corn, and his wheat had trebled in price during the last twenty years, while for his wine he probably got a gulden (fifty cents) a gallon. He and others like him are growing rich under the influence of free labor and railroads. His forests alone are becoming of immense value.

Subsequently I drove out with him over a portion of his large estates. We passed through vast fields of Indian corn, lucerne—which is much used here for green feed—and wheat; then reaching the pastures, in some of which were immense herds of white cattle, in others hogs—an animal difficult to keep now with the high price of corn—and again in others sheep, mainly the ordinary black and white breed of the country. There were no fences, and with each herd were shepherds. Some droves were separated, having "the foot-and-mouth" disease. As far as the eye could reach were scarcely any trees. Near here begins a famous district, which was leveled and rounded by tertiary floods, and where there are no trees, called the "Mesoseser."

My host, with the usual hospitality of his country, would not let me take the diligence, but drove me in to town, some fifteen miles, in his own carriage, saying that it was to him "enormes leid" that I would not stay for days.

I shall always recall his kindness and hospitality with gratitude, and remember with pleasure that such a candid man exists among the old gentry of Transylvania.

WASHINGTON NEWS.

Important Questions as to the Salaries of High Officials to Come Up During the Next Session—Probable Changes in the Cabinet.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—A most important question, which will probably come early before Congress at the approaching session, is the increase of salaries for the more important officers in the civil service, and probably a complete regrading of the entire scale. This is not a new movement. True civil service reform demands it. There has not been a session of Congress for years in which the pressure for an increase of salaries of one grade or another has not been felt. The necessity of a very material increase of some of the salaries has been generally acknowledged, as the bureau officers are shamefully underpaid, when it is considered that they are the officers immediately responsible for the efficient, honest transaction of the clerical labor of the departments, and that many of them, as for instance the Indian Commissioner, are charged by law with great administrative duties and trusts. The very highest order of business and executive ability and character is needed in these positions, and cannot be secured without the greatest difficulty, nor long retained. A half dozen or more of the very best bureau officers are just on the point of resigning to go into private employment. It is doubtful if half the bureau officers live on the salaries paid them by the Government, and none of them do who have incomes from other sources. The Cabinet officers, too, have to spend thousands a year in addition to the pay of their position, or else disappoint the people in their manner of living and entertaining. For a Cabinet officer to keep house here and entertain in a style at all fitting the position, at least $17,000 to $20,000 per year is required. They are allowed but $8,000. Whether there will be any movement made to increase these salaries, and those of the Supreme Court and the President, is uncertain, but there is certainly a prospect of its being broached. The salary of the President must be raised between now and the 4th of next March, in order to have it take effect during any part of President Grant's second term. It is certain that he will not ask to have his own salary increased, nor will he exercise any influence to have it increased, but if the proposition is made in Congress to raise it $50,000 per year, it will hardly meet with much opposition. It is more likely, however, that an appropriation will be made for a new Executive mansion. The clerical work of the Executive Department is fast demanding more room than the limited space now given to it in the White House, and the whole of that building may profitably be devoted to official purposes. It is not fit for a dwelling, and no private gentleman of wealth could be induced to live in it. It is an old plan to have a dwelling-house for the President in a different part of the city and use the White House as an office, and it is now quite time for it to be carried out. Public interests, as well as the comfort and health of the President's family, require this, and very likely it may be brought forward this Winter, else it certainly will be by the next Congress.

NOW THE ELECTION RETURNS WERE RECEIVED.

There is a great deal of joy among Republicans at the unprecedented triumph of yesterday, but the outward show of enthusiasm is not proportionate, because the excitement culminated with the October elections. The general result of yesterday's elections was anticipated, only it was better than was counted upon by most. Telegraphic congratulations have been received by the President from all parts of the country. The usual order and quiet at the White House have been undisturbed, and the visitor there today has seen nothing and heard nothing to remind him that an election had been held in which any of the occupants had an interest. The ordinary business of the Executive Department has been transacted with the usual careful attention. The President has never had a doubt of the result, and had no anxiety to be relieved. No man, however, was less deeply interested in all the details of the returns which revealed the grand victory of the party than he, and scarcely any one else received the news with so much equanimity and composure.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

CABINET CHANGES.

That there will be at least one change in the Cabinet at the commencement of the next Presidential term, there is no question. It is known that Secretary Fish has repeatedly expressed his wish to be relieved from the position of Secretary of State. This desire will be gratified at the end of the present term. There is no probability of a change of Attorney-General. Judge Williams recently remarked to a friend that, although he could have been elected Senator from Oregon, he declined being a candidate in order that he might remain in his present office. There is good reason for stating that any remarks with regard to the other members of the Cabinet would be mere speculation, but it may be said that the commissions of all of them will expire at the close of the present term, thus necessitating new commissions to those serving as Cabinet officers after the 4th of March next.

The First Congress District.

All honor to the Republicans of Suffolk, Queens and Richmond Counties! They have had a hard fight and a notable triumph, carrying all three of the counties on the Congress ticket. They completely revolutionize Queens and Richmond, and largely increase their majority in Suffolk, hitherto the only Republican strongholds in the district. Mr. Henry J. SCUDDER, the Republican candidate for Congress, is returned by 1,200 to 1,300 majority, and we owe the Republicans of the district an apology for so hastily concluding yesterday that Mr. Scudder was beaten, and Mr. Covert of Queens, his opponent, returned. The District also returns three Republican Assemblymen to one Democrat, and our friends in Richmond County, (Staten Island,) besides giving Mr. Scudder a majority and electing their Assemblyman, have routed the entire County Ring, so long the bane of the tax-payers of the Island.

AMUSEMENTS.

Musical.

ITALIAN OPERA.

"Crispino e la Comare" is the prettiest of late Italian comic operas, and Miss Kellogg has in Annetta a part in which her voice and her execution find ample scope for display. The smallness of the audience at the Academy of Music, yesterday, can, therefore, only be attributed to the inclement weather, and not to a disregard either of the charm of the opera or the merits of the songstress. Happily the capital of "Crispino" was in no way affected by the numbers of the attendance, and so much prominence was given to the best-liked points of the score that the assemblage was able, by honest expressions of delight, to cheer the performers as effectually as a crowded auditorium could have done. Miss Kellogg is one of the foremost of chanteuse legères, and she interprets rôles similar to that of Annetta with unexceptionable facility and brilliancy. Her efforts were heartily applauded, last night, and the duet between Crispino and heroine—"Ah! sì, sì, marito mio"—was repeated. Crispino, it need hardly be said, was Signor Ronconi, who approved himself once more as animated and humorous a representative of the cobbler as could be wished. The two physicians who join in the celebrated trio—which, by the way, had to be sung twice—were personated respectively by Signori Reina and Sparapani, and the tenor rôle was assumed by Signor Graf, who made clear on the stage, as he has already done in the concert-room, the possession of a light and pleasant tenor voice, which he manages quite cleverly. Miss Kellogg and Signor Ronconi were summoned before the curtain at the close of the representation. On Friday Mme. Lucca and Miss Kellogg are to be heard in "Le Nozze."

MRS. WINTERBURN'S CONCERT.

Mrs. Charlotte V. Winterburn, formerly known as Miss Hutchings, will give a concert at the Academy of Music, this evening. She is to have the co-operation of Mr. Whitney, basso; of Herr Walter, violinist; of Mr. Lockwood, harpist, and of Mr. Thomas' orchestra.

MR. BONAWITZ'S CONCERT.

Mr. Bonawitz's concert is to occur at Steinway Hall this evening. The gentleman's new symphony in A minor, and his scherzo, for piano and orchestra, are to be recited, together with an interesting programme of piano-music, and several songs, which will be sung by Mme. Boscetti.

PERSONAL.

Mme. Jennie Van Zandt returned from Europe on Monday, and is at present at the Everett House.

OPERA BOUFFE.

The finest representation of a brilliant season of opera bouffe was given in presence of a very large assemblage, at the Olympic Theatre, Tuesday evening, "Barbe-Bleue" has substantial claims to the title of Offenbach's most durably-popular opera. The libretto which the composer has illustrated is amusing, and the music going hand in hand with the words is not only vivacious, but, at many points, melodious and elegant. An excellent company is required for the recitation of the story and the score, and for those of our readers who are acquainted with the opera, it will be praise sufficient, now that our space is limited, to mention that "Barbe-Bleue" was capitally interpreted, without entering upon a detailed account of the rehearsal. It is impossible, however, not to cite Mlle. Aimée's personation of Boulotte, and M. Juteau's picture of Barbe-Bleue, as admirable performances. Mlle. Aimée's singing and acting were as a plane throughout the representation, and M. Juteau's vocal labors would have been quite as satisfactory as his exceedingly intelligent and spirited histrionic efforts, had he not occasionally forced a voice which has a freshness, a sweetness, and a volume too rare among tenors to be imperiled by an attempt to add to these qualities unnecessary power. All the principal numbers assigned to these artists were redemanded, and so was the dashing finale of act the first, which, like most of the concerted pieces, was done with delightful briskness and unanimity. The success of "Barbe-Bleue" warranted the repetition of Tuesday's programme last night, and its retention this evening. Mlle. Aimée, M. Juteau, and the whole company could not be heard to more advantage than in the work last produced.

THE THOMAS SYMPHONY CONCERT.

The programme of the Thomas Symphony Concert, to occur at Steinway Hall on Saturday evening next, is before us. Mr. Thomas' orchestra will recite the overture to Gluck's "Iphigenia in Aulis," Beethoven's symphony No. 7 in A; "Wotan's Farewell," from Wagner's "Die Walküren," and Liszt's "Mephisto Waltz." Mr. George L. Osgood, the new tenor, is to sing Schumann's setting of five poems by Lenau, (Opus 90.)

Miscellaneous.

BURLESQUE AT THE OLYMPIC.

Miss Lydia Thompson and her company, after a very successful series of representations in Boston and other cities, will commence the fulfillment of a brief engagement at the Olympic Theatre on Monday next. The ever-welcome performers will appear in a new burlesque, and we doubt not that their entertainments, which are at all events harmless, will be as largely attended and as productive of pleasure as the most sanguine of managers could desire. The sale of seats will be opened this morning.

"MRS. JARLEY'S WAX-WORKS."

The last exhibition of "Mrs. Jarley's Wax Works" may be witnessed at Association Hall this evening. We know of no entertainment better fitted to excite merriment.

CONNECTICUT.

Vote of the State, with Four Towns to Hear From—Republican Majority About Five Thousand—Hawley's Majority.

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 5.—The returns at the Courant office, lacking only four towns in the State, give the following result by counties:

County.	Grant.	Greeley.	Scattering.
Hartford	10628	10302	23
New-Haven	11248	11019	26
New-London	6014	5628	17
Fairfield	8366	8479	67
Windham	3995	3158	11
Litchfield	4423	4347	60
Middlesex	2246	2421	40
Tolland	2361	1913	12
Total	50163	45440	205

The towns to hear from are Salem, Chester, Killingworth, and Union.

In this Congressional District, Gen. J. R. Hawley is elected over Eaton by 411, with the small town of Union to hear from.

The vote of Hartford County: Hawley, 10,847; Eaton, 10,417. Tolland County: Hawley, 2,200; Eaton, 1,909.

FLORIDA.

Republican Majority in Twelve Counties of 6,000—A Close Vote, but the State Probably for Grant.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., Nov. 5.—The returns come in very slowly. Twelve counties heard from give Hart, the Republican candidate for Governor, 6,000 majority over Bloxham, the Liberal candidate. Five of the above counties have always polled a very heavy Republican majority. There are twenty-seven counties yet to be heard from. Both parties claim the State by a very small majority.

LATER.—The vote in Florida will be very close. Bloxham, Democrat, is probably elected Governor. Greeley runs behind the State ticket.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Strong Republican Gains Throughout the State.

WHEELING, West Virginia, Nov. 5.—All returns thus far received show heavy Republican gains in this State. The vote cannot be definitely settled for some time.

NOTES.

The Iron Explanation.

The cheerful World says:

"The true explanation of this defeat is not to be found in the nomination of Mr. Greeley, but in that previous letting-down of party lines and utter which recommended our National Convention to an act of sheer desperation."

Precisely. It was an act of felonious murder.

Advertisement. (Wrec.)

Strayed, lost or stolen, from the premises of the editor and principal proprietors of the Tribune, some time between the months of April and November, a very large and fine Tidal Wave. Anybody giving notice of its whereabouts will receive the humble thanks of the proprietor aforesaid, who is in too reduced circumstances to offer any more substantial reward.

"Postponed."

We regret to learn from the manager of the enterprise that that highly-entertaining spectacular piece known as "The Liberal Triumph," which had been prepared at great cost, and which had promised some of the finest "illusion pieces" ever produced on this or any other stage, has been "postponed." By prolonged and costly advertising, this unexampled work had excited the greatest expectations. We trust that the "manager" has not been trifling with the public, and is well assured that the "postponement" he now announces is not a permanent abandonment of the whole thing.

Too Late.

The Express, which was among the first to desert its colors in panic, and seek refuge under the white flag of Horace Greeley, says:

"If there is any virtue or advantage whatever in having two parties, the Republican Party is far too strong for the best interests of the country."

Then why did not the Democracy keep up a decent and effective opposition, instead of proving first, by the Tammany frauds, that its only motive was hope of plunder, and second, by Greeley's nomination, that there was no principle nor pretension to be dragged in the mud for the sake of power?

What Is It?

The Tribune (Democratic) is not an "organ" as we all know. Judging from the fact that on Wednesday morning there were nine States casting seventy-eight electoral votes which it had not heard from, it can hardly be called a newspaper. What is it?

TENNESSEE.

The State in Doubt on the Presidential Ticket—Maynard, Republican, Elected Congressman at Large.

MEMPHIS, Nov. 6.—Official returns from nine wards give Grant 4,440, Greeley, 4,077; Brown, for Governor, 4,089; Freeman, for Governor, 4,301. Congressman at Large—Maynard, 4,303; Johnson, 2,270; Cheatham, 1,860. The First Ward returns are not in, but they will reduce Grant's majority and increase Johnson's. The county has gone Republican by probably 1,500.

There is a contest between Haynes, Dem., for Congress, and Lewis, Rep., in this district. It is very close, with the chances in favor of the latter. The Republicans gain largely throughout the district. Cheatham polled a heavy vote in West Tennessee, while dispatches from East Tennessee indicate that Maynard carried that section over both Cheatham and Johnson.

GRAND JUNCTION, Nov. 6.—Grant's majority is 133. There are large Republican gains.

UNION CITY, Nov. 6.—Five districts in Obion County give Cheatham 670; Johnson, 130; Maynard, 210.

BRUNSWICK, Nov. 6.—Grant, 669; Greeley, 363; Freeman, 705; Brown, 363; Maynard, 667; Cheatham, 236; Johnson, 180.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 6.—The full vote of Nashville gives Grant, 2,815; Greeley, 2,912; Johnson, for Congressman at Large, 2,239; Maynard, 2,519; Cheatham, 1,066. For Congressman in the Fifth District, the vote is for Brien, (Ind.,) 1,324; Harrison, (Rep.,) 2,949; Golladay, 1,019. Brown, for Governor, 2,539; Freeman, 2,913.

The Republicans elect a Senator for Nashville and Davidson County, beating John Overton, the Democratic nominee, and also elect two members of the Legislature, one of them a colored man.

Returns from fifty-five towns and precincts, embracing every division of the State, give Maynard 12,107; Cheatham, 10,661; Johnson, 5,471, indicating Maynard's election.

Andrew Johnson is in Nashville, and is not disparited by defeat. He says he has broken the smothering crust that had formed over the best interests of Tennessee.

Official Vote of Memphis—Lewis for Congress Certainly Elected.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Nov. 6.—The official vote of the city gives Greeley 4,455, and Grant, 4,869; Brown, (Dem.,) for Governor, 4,582; Freeman, (Rep.,) for Governor, 4,700; Cheatham, (Dem.,) for Congress at Large, 2,087; Johnson, (Dem.,) for Congress at Large, 3,692; Maynard, (Rep.,) for Congress at Large, 4,583; Haynes, (Dem.,) for Congress, 4,196; Lewis, (Rep.,) for Congress, 4,314. Lewis is undoubtedly elected to Congress. The total vote polled is the largest ever polled. Nothing definite has been heard from the Eighth Congressional District.

Seven out of Nine Congressmen Republicans.

NASHVILLE, Nov. 6.—The full vote of only a few counties has yet been received. Greeley's majority in the State is estimated at 20,000, and Gov. Brown's about the same.

The Republicans claim the election of Thornburgh, (Rep.,) for Congress in the Second District; Munn, (Sorehead,) in the Eighth District is elected; the Third is doubtful, with the chances in favor of Crutchfield, (Rep.) The State Committee believe that the Republicans have elected seven out of nine Congressmen.

The Horse Disease.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 5.—The horse disease, now at its worst stage, is aggravated by the rainy weather. Very few passenger cars are running, and there are more vehicles on the street drawn by men than by horses. All the trades are paralyzed by the difficulty of transporting goods.

PORT JERVIS, N. Y., Nov. 5.—The horse disease is prevailing to a great extent at Port Jervis. Nearly all the horses owned by the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company are affected. Boats are tied up and navigation is nearly suspended. There are many deaths among the canal horses.

CAMDEN, N. J., Nov. 6.—The unfavorable weather to-day gave much impetus to the horse disease. All the street-cars are stopped. Few horses are seen on the streets.

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 6.—The horse disease has broken out here with great severity. The majority of the horses in the city are affected.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 6.—Owing to the heavy rain today very few horses were on the streets, and these were heavily wrapped to guard them against the influence of the weather. There were no hacks on the streets and none to be found in the livery stables. The horse disease is now at its height. A sound animal can scarcely be found anywhere.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Nov. 6.—In consequence of the prevalence of the horse disease here much inconvenience is experienced. The vote in this city yesterday was much affected by it, as a great many voters could not reach the polls for lack of transportation. The damp weather has increased the number of cases, and the disease is raging more extensively than ever. This afternoon the horse cars stopped running, and it is rumored that the navigation of the Delaware and Hudson Canal will soon be suspended. No fatal cases have been reported since Monday.

A Burglar Hung by a Mob—His Jailer Dies from Heart Disease.

From the Denver (Colorado) News, Nov. 2.

The News announced, a few days ago, the arrest of a person named White for burglarizing several rooms at the Chilcott House, Pueblo. Sheriff Cook, who made the arrest, took the prisoner to Pueblo and turned him over to the authorities there. He was examined and bound over in the sum of $2,000. With the most audacious cheek he pleaded not guilty, alleging that the property found in his possession was handed to him by another party in Denver, and that he was entirely ignorant of receiving stolen goods. It will be remembered that he confessed to Sheriff Cook having taken the watches and the money from the Chilcott House. His ride to Pueblo made him forget this circumstance. After his examination he was remanded to jail.

During the night of Tuesday, several parties—as yet unknown to the general public—took it into their heads to dispose of White's case in the most summary manner. Going to the jail they secured the jailer by some means, and bound and gagged the jailer, after which they took White from his cell and led him to a telegraph-pole about 300 yards from the Court-house, and there hung him. The body was discovered dangling, barefooted, barefooted, and with no clothes except pantaloons and shirt. The corpse hung there until noon, when it was cut down and interred. The rope used was a common clothes-line.

One of the most singular features of this tragedy is yet to be recorded. The jailer, Mr. Briggs, who was in charge of the jail, and who was bound, as above stated, died on yesterday, within hours after White was taken from the jail. It is thought that his death was caused by heart disease, superinduced by the excitement attending the transaction of the night before.

THE NEW AWARD.

Decision of the Emperor William in the San Juan Case—Impressions of the London Newspaper Press.

The Daily Telegraph published, on Oct. 26, the dispatch following: "The three referees handed in their report to the Foreign Department four weeks ago. The report, which, I understand, will not be published unless by the request of the contending parties, charges upon England the vagueness in the wording of the Treaty of 1846, which was proposed and drawn up by her representatives. Charts of the San Juan Islands existed at the time; and it was possible, say the referees, to have attained greater precision in the delineation of the boundary-line. On this ground they hold the place defensible that the geography of the coast was not exactly known when the Treaty was framed, and state that the Spaniards had surveyed it as early as in 1791, 1792, and 1793. The word 'southerly' in the Treaty, says the report, ought to be interpreted to mean the shortest channel to the Strait of Fuca. The natural continuation of the middle of the Gulf of Georgia is represented as being more than any other the Haro Channel; and it is asserted that the Rosario Channel, claimed as the boundary by the British Government, doesnot immediately connect with the Strait of Fuca—thus rendering untenable the English argument that the boundary line should pass along the whole of that inlet. Only two folio pages are occupied by the Emperor's decision on the subject-matter of the referees' very voluminous and conscientiously minute report. The decision begins thus: 'Whereas the Treaty of Washington stipulates, in article 30, to leave me to decide which claim respecting the San Juan boundary is most in accordance with the true interpretation, I now decide upon the appeal that, &c., according to the dispatch I sent you yesterday. A special messenger starts for Washington to-night, bearing the Imperial verdict."

PRESS VIEWS.

The London Times says that it is some satisfaction to understand that the award of the Emperor William is expressed in different terms from what men were at first led to believe. The Haro Channel boundary is simply decided to be that most in accordance with existing treaties, and a determination to this extent was, of course, a necessary preliminary to any award at all. The award assumes its greatest interest when considered in connection with the circumstance that British Columbia is now formally incorporated with and has become a constituent part of the Dominion of Canada. One point for consideration is the effect the award may have on the Canadian plans of connecting together the extremities of the Dominion—Vancouver's Island and Nova Scotia. The Times has no doubt that a letter which it publishes reflects accurately the Canadian sentiment. The decision that the Haro Channel is the line of demarkation between the two countries brings the frontier of the United States conveniently near what was proposed as the line of the railway, but the only effect produced by it is to change the course of the highway. It is impossible not to feel some sort of admiration for enthusiasm and confidence like this, and it is certain that a people animated with such feelings will not be permanently depressed by an unfavorable award from the German Emperor. The Post gives a long account of the history of the case and its treatment by the Commissioners at Washington, and contends that when the Government, through their Commissioners, in 1871, departed from the lines laid down by Lord Russell and Lord Clarendon for the settlement of the question, they completely mismanaged the whole matter, and gave another signal instance of their inability to treat diplomatically with the Americans. Palmerston, Lord Russell, or Lord Clarendon been at the head of affairs, the San Juan question, like other questions, would have been settled after a very different fashion. The Telegraph remarks that the English public receives the decision with dignified calmness rather than with satisfaction. The certainty that the arbitration conducted by the highest tribunal and took the amplest care to form a sincere opinion, softens the asperity of an unexpected defeat. The Standard observes that the English public will receive the decision of the Emperor of Germany, fatal though it is to the contention of this country, with a good grace, and to the interests in the future, with the respect it deserves. Yet it would be idle, not to say childish, to attempt to conceal that the national annoyance will be extreme, and the sense of mortification deeper and more enduring the more the whole facts and bearings of the case become known. It may be doubted if England's experience of arbitration will render that country inclined to have much recourse to it in future.

A Woman Tossed and Gored by a Bull in the Streets of Baltimore.

From the Baltimore American, Nov. 6.

About 9 o'clock yesterday morning, while a bull was being driven through Lombard-street toward Patterson Park, it became unruly and infuriated, owing to its being annoyed and worried by a number of boys, and finally, in the most excited manner, rushed through the street toward Broadway, creating the most intense excitement and alarm, every one in the street hastening to seek a place of shelter. Unfortunately, Mrs. L. Whitcraft, returning from the Fell's Point Market with a large basket on her arm, had just reached the crossing at Broadway as the bull dashed along, and almost before she was aware of her danger the poor woman was struck by the infuriated beast and tossed some ten feet in the air, to the horror of the spectators. As she descended she was again caught on the horns of the infuriated animal and tossed a second time and gored in a most shocking manner. A number of policemen and others rushed to the assistance of Mrs. Whitcraft, and drove the bull off, but not before she had received injuries that will most probably render her a cripple for life. She was promptly conveyed to her residence, and the assistance of Dr. Dwinelle and others availed of. It was found that her right leg and arm were both broken, and that her person was terribly lacerated by the horns of the animal. After the rescue of Mrs. Whitcraft the bull turned and ran up Lombard-street westward, followed by a crowd, at least twenty shots from pistols being fired into his head without further effect than increasing his fury. Near the intersection of Central-avenue a colored man rushed at the bull with an ax, and with one blow on the head dispatched him.

The Floods in Italy.

Writing from Naples, on Oct. 19, a correspondent of the London Times says: "You will have already heard of the tempestuous weather which has interrupted the pleasure of His Majesty and inflicted so much damage on his subjects. From north to south it has been the same. The Lake of Como overflowed its banks, the Arno rose and wrecked some houses, the Tiber menaced Rome, and the damage done in this neighborhood has been partly described. As a consequence of the great floods, occasioned by the heavy rains, railway communication throughout Italy has been more or less interrupted; but though there have been hair-breadth escapes, fortunately we have not heard of loss of life. The railway from Florence to Leghorn was interrupted between San Romano and Larotta, and the Empoli-Orvieto line between Empoli and Pontedassi, while on the Maremmana line the service has been entirely suspended. From the same causes the line between Florence and Pistoia leading to Bologna has been interrupted, and traffic entirely suspended, while the communication between Rome and Naples has now for nearly a month been interrupted, though not suspended. No night trains, however, leave at present. Every Autumn, indeed, more or less damage is occasioned in Italy by heavy floods, but this year it has been more general and more disastrous, and the sentiment of the country will have to consider how far these evils may be guarded against, as assuredly they may be in many instances. This Government has, however, already done so much in multiplying and improving the internal communications of the country that we may look forward confidently to the future. Italy cannot be redeemed from the state into which she had fallen through the ignorance of petty despots in twelve years."

The Burned District of Wisconsin—Satisfactory Reports of the Recovery of the Settlers.

From the Milwaukee Sentinel, Nov. 4.

We learn from Capt. Langworthy, who has just returned from the burned region, the present status of matters in that locality. The crops of all kinds, for which seeds were furnished by the committee, have given an abundant yield, and with but few exceptions, those who returned to farms, desolate and uninviting in the Spring, have an abundance for their own use, and many of them a surplus for market. Peshtigo alone will sell 10,000 to 20,000 bushels of wheat, and the Peninsula a much larger amount. Potatoes furnish a large surplus crop, and are universally fine, owing to change of seed, and are selling on the lake shore for about thirty cents. There is no one set of the Relief Committee which has been productive of more substantial good than furnishing potatoes for seed.

Although the general relief business closed on the 1st of June, Capt. Langworthy, having observed the necessity, has succeeded in raising means to purchase about 150 relief cows, which have been distributed among those whose cows were burned and the destitute people unable to replace theirs.

The Captain reports that the majority of the twenty-seven school-houses burned are finished and occupied, and that the remainder soon will be. The roads are rapidly being cleared, the burned bridges rebuilt, and the work will soon be done. The school-house and road work is done through legislative appropriation, and under the direction of Gov. Washburn, who has personally inspected our worst portions of the burned districts. Capt. Langworthy was also authorized to purchase lots, and build or buy houses for a few destitute widows and others crippled by the fire to an extent which prevented them from earning a livelihood. For that purpose a pension relief fund was set aside. This work is nearly completed.

COMMENTS OF THE PRESS.

How the Great Victory is Received by the Republican Journals of the Country.

We give below brief extracts from the leading Republican journals of the country received at this office yesterday:

THE PEOPLE LEAD.

From the Utica Herald.

It has been made very clear, by the results of yesterday's election, that the people are not the blind followers of leaders. The great majority do their own thinking, and not on their own judgment. They cheerish leaders so long as they lead aright; but when they forsake the consistent paths of principle and seek to dictate, the people are no longer with them. This is a lesson which all emotionous men will do well to heed in the future, and leave their passions, prejudices, and personal spites out of the political canvass. If they do not, they may expect to have the seal of popular condemnation set upon themselves and their acts.

THE SOBER SECOND THOUGHT.

From the Baltimore American.

Were it not for the brutal manner in which the campaign has been conducted by the Tribune and its allies, we should feel heartily sorry for Mr. Greeley, who will retire to Chappaqua a wiser man—a good deal more of a sage—than when he left it a month ago on his tour to beg votes. The people of the United States have a great deal of good sense and good feeling, and when a little time is given for the sober second thought, a great deal of good judgment too. The unparalleled and outrageous abuse heaped upon Gen. Grant, by deserters and enemies, and by him borne in silence, has awakened their feeling in his behalf as much as his merits and the cause he represents have convinced their judgments. They approve the policy of the Republican Party. They indorse the Administration of Gen. Grant by enormous majorities.

A REBUKE TO CALUMNY.

From the Providence Journal.

The majorities given for President Grant in the loyal States that saved the country under his lead are perfectly astonishing to those who have not carefully watched the current and drift of the popular mind. See New-Hampshire, with her 4,000 majority; Connecticut, with her 5,000; the Empire State redeemed with her 30,000, and the old Keystone holding the arch with more than 100,000 majority for the man the people have delighted to honor! What a rebuke to the misrepresentation, the vituperation, the abuse, that has been heaped upon the patient, silent man, who is now so nobly, so emphatically vindicated!

THE DEMAND FOR A REAL PEACE.

From the Philadelphia North American.

The country desires a rest from political agitation, and it ought to be accorded. But if this verdict at the polls means anything at all, it assuredly means that the laws must be enforced, that rebel banditti must be suppressed, and that entanglement must be real. The party cannot afford now to stop short of the complete enforcement of this. If the Southern whites are sincere in demanding internal peace, they can now have it by putting a stop to the outrages that have disgraced many of the Southern States, and by showing their determination to resent the newly acquired rights and immunities of the freedmen. If the Democratic journals of the North are wise, they will so advise their Southern allies. We had much rather this pacification should be voluntary; but it must be reached, even though the alternative be an unpleasant one.

COMPLETENESS OF THE VICTORY IN THIS STATE.

From the Albany Express.

We have secured an overwhelming majority in Congress, and, better than all, have redeemed the State of New-York, not only carrying it for Grant by a very large majority, but also electing Gen. DIX and the whole of our excellent Republican State ticket. The State Legislature is also ours, thus assuring us of the re-election of that faithful representative of the Republican Party, Roscoe Conkling. Thomas E. Alvord, Dewitt C. Littlejohn, and other apostates who accepted nominations upon the Democratic Legislative ticket, are defeated. Elias H. Roberts and other tried and true representatives are returned to Congress, despite the frantic efforts of the coalitionists to defeat them. Indeed, from one end of the State to the other comes the same story—and it tells how indignant the people have been over the efforts to deceive them by such a miserable abortion as the Greeley fusion ticket.

SOME OF THE RESULTS.

From the Boston Globe.

The re-election of Grant will give peace to the South by the establishment of justice and equality in that section of the Union, and by banishing forever the idle dream of those discontented spirits who strive for the restoration of the slave-holders' aristocracy. It will give prosperity to the whole country, and promote the steady development of its industrial interests. It insures the strength and permanence of the Union by banishing forever the pernicious heresy of the right of secession, which, under the false and deceitive name of "local self-government," reared its hydra-head at Cincinnati, and sought to cast its malign influence over the whole people.

THE RIGHT RECONCILIATION.

From the Norwich (Conn.) Bulletin.

It is a glorious termination of an arduous and bitter campaign. It is a fitting indorsement of unostentatious merit and tried patriotism. It is a just rebuke to sham reform. It is a righteous decision in favor of reconciliation only on the basis of equal rights to all.

THE WORK BEFORE US.

From the Boston Advertiser.

The violent and unjust vituperation to which the Administration has been subjected has provoked in its behalf the chivalrous sympathy even of its opponents. The occasion is ripe for initiating the work of removing every reasonable ground of complaint or distrust. Prudence and advantage may thus be taken of the period of good feeling which by a natural reaction is almost certain to follow the intense antagonisms of the past few

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

At the Exchange yesterday, Wednesday, Nov. 6, James M. Miller, by order of the Supreme Court, in foreclosure, under the direction of R. C. Brennich, Esq., referee, disposed of the following real estate: Four lots, together forming a plot 100 by 100.5, with building thereon, situate on the north side of East Fifty-third-street, 325 feet east of Second-avenue, sold subject to mortgages amounting to $22,000, and purchased by Wm. A. Bugelow, for $18,000 over and above this figure, making the total price realized $41,000. The buildings consisted of two new four-story and basement iron front houses, located on the centre of the block, with a small frame house or frame office and frame shed on another portion of the ground. The property was sold in parcels, but brought, in the aggregate, the sum noted. The purchaser was the plaintiff in the legal action and the owner of second mortgages. The other legal sale noticed for yesterday, by Mr. Miller, of a house and lot on East Fifty-seventh-street, 75 feet east of Second-avenue, did not take place, the case having been previously disposed of. In addition to the above, R. P. Fairchild, under a Supreme Court foreclosure decree, Geo. F. Demarest, Esq., referee, sold the premises known as No. 21 Broome-street, south side, 25 feet west of Mangin-street, improved, a lot 25.by 75, with two story brick building upon same, for $5,700, the purchaser being Peter Clark. No further business was transacted. The attendance at the Exchange was very fair, and more interest than usual was evinced in the proceedings. It is a probable view, election matters having been settled, that a good deal of activity will be shown, and that for the next few weeks business will be brisk. The sales to take place this month are, many of them, of interest, and as a consequence the market will soon give signs of improvement.

For today the following auctions are announced, at which property as noted will be offered: By Muller, Willkins & Co., at public auction, the three-story brick tenement-houses and lots, known as Nos. 46 and 48 Centre-street, east side, running through to Park-street, between Duane and Pearl streets; the lots together being in size 44.7 by 48 by 50 by 73.8; also, at a Supreme Court sale, the premises known as No. 60 Centre-street, east side, near Pearl-street, embracing a full lot, with front and rear buildings thereon; also, at an adjourned Supreme Court sale, a house and lot on the north side of West One Hundred and Twenty-third-street, 19 feet west of Seventh-avenue, lot 20 by 92.11. By A. J. Bleecker, Sons & Co., at an adjourned Supreme Court sale, the two four-story and basement high-stoop brown-stone front houses and lots, known as Nos. 411 and 413 West Fifty-seventh-street, north side, about 111 feet west of Ninth-avenue, lots each in size 21.4 by 100.5. By Thomas Leverich, as a Supreme Court sale, the five-story brick tenement-house and lot No. 343 East Twenty-seventh-street, north side, 145 feet west of First-avenue; lot 21.6 by 96.9. By James M. Miller, at an adjourned Supreme Court sale, the store and lot No. 199 Church-street; lot 21.3 by 75; and by Winans, Sands & Garrison, at an adjourned Supreme Court sale, the block of land, comprising some thirty-eight lots, bounded by Second and Third avenues, One Hundred and First and One Hundred and Second streets.

At private contract, Neaff & Andrews, No. 1,841 Third-avenue, report having recently sold the three four-story brown-stone front houses and lots, (each 20.4 by 43 by 100,) Nos. 215, 217 and 219 East Eighty-fourth-street, for $45,000. Also, a three-story frame house and plot of land, 25 by 40 by 200, located at Fairview, N. J., to Mr. Hall, of Jersey City. Mr. Raymond, No. 828 Fifth-street, also reports having recently sold the following City realty: Five lots on the north side of One Hundred and Twelfth-street and five lots on the south side of One Hundred and Thirteenth-street—rears adjoining—293 feet west of Eighth-avenue, sold together in one plot for $23,000.

7 PER CENT. GOLD BONDS.

INTEREST PAYABLE APRIL AND OCTOBER. REGISTERED OR COUPON PAYABLE IN LONDON OR NEW-YORK.
AT 90 AND ACCRUED INTEREST IN CURRENCY.

THIS ROAD, WITH THE CANADA SOUTHERN, FORMS THE NEW TRUNK AIR-LINE FROM BUFFALO TO CHICAGO. IT IS UNDER THE SAME CONTROL AND MANAGEMENT, AND IS BEING BUILT BY THE SAME PARTIES WHO BUILT THE CANADA SOUTHERN; MILTON COURTRIGHT, JOHN F. TRACY, DAVID DOWS, WILLIAM L. SCOTT, HENRY FARNAM, R. A. FORSYTH, JOHN M. BURKE, B. L. SYKES, JR., ALL DIRECTORS BOTH IN THE CHICAGO AND NORTH-WEST AND THE CHICAGO AND ROCK ISLAND; GEORGE OPDYKE, OF THE NEW-YORK MIDLAND; SIDNEY DILLON, DANIEL DREW, JOHN ROSS, DAVID STEWART, SAMUEL J. TILDEN, KENYON COX, AND OTHER PROMINENT RAILROAD MEN. THE ROAD IS BEING RAPIDLY BUILT IN THE BEST POSSIBLE MANNER, WITH SIXTY-POUND STEEL RAILS THROUGHOUT ITS ENTIRE LINE, AND WILL BE COMPLETED DURING THE COMING YEAR; NEARLY ONE-HALF OF THE ROAD WILL BE COMPLETED AND IN RUNNING ORDER BY THE 1ST OF JANUARY NEXT, SO THAT THE ENTIRE LINE, FROM BUFFALO TO CHICAGO, WILL WITHIN THAT TIME BE IN SUCCESSFUL OPERATION. THE BUILDERS OF THIS ROAD CONTROL ENOUGH OF THE LEADING LINES RUNNING FROM CHICAGO TO INSURE AN ENORMOUS BUSINESS FROM THE START, TAKING INTO CONSIDERATION THE IMPORTANT FACT, PATENT TO ALL WHO STUDY THE STATISTICS OF TRADE, THAT THE PRESENT TRUNK LINES, NOW TAXED TO THEIR UTMOST CAPACITY, ARE NOT AFFORDING FACILITIES EQUAL TO THE GREAT AND CONSTANTLY-INCREASING DEMAND FOR TRANSPORTATION, AND THAT THIS ROAD, THROUGH ITS ENTIRE LENGTH, BEING PRACTICALLY STRAIGHT AND LEVEL AND SHORTER BY THIRTY-FIVE MILES THAN BY ANY OTHER NOW BUILT, OR THAT CAN BE BUILT, it must be apparent that this line is not only needed, but must be a great success. The proceeds of these Bonds will complete and equip the entire road, and we confidently recommend them as a most safe and profitable investment.

SUPREME COURT.—IN THE MATTER of the opening and extending new streets, commonly known as Dyckman-street,

THE CITY VOTE.

Complete Success of the Republican County Ticket.

Havemeyer and Phelps Certainly Elected.

A Scheme Concocted to Defeat Them by Fraud.

Full Returns of the New-York and Brooklyn Canvass.

It was reported yesterday afternoon in well-informed circles that an attempt had been made to change the vote on Mayor and District-Attorney, in order to "count in" Lawrence and Donohue. That some such scheme was on foot appears to be well founded, for the statement that Lawrence was elected by a small plurality was busily circulated all about town at an early hour, and the events that led to it are somewhat interesting.

Up to the hour of our going to press yesterday morning the impression prevailed that Mr. Havemeyer had been elected by from 5,000 to 6,000 majority, and we so stated it in yesterday's issue. No one questioned the correctness of these figures at Police Head-quarters, though the building was thronged all night by Tammany-Greeleyite politicians, who were naturally anxious that Lawrence, their nominee, should be the winning man. The decisive plurality secured by Mr. Havemeyer made many long faces in the corridors, for there appeared to be no hope, as Havemeyer had steadily led his competitors in nearly all of the 615 districts reported up to 4:30 o'clock A. M. Yet the plot was probably even then in process of concoction, and the desperate men who had placed all their hopes on the Mayoralty were preparing to renew the tactics so familiar in the palmy days of Tweed and Company, when ballots went for nought, and the leaders could "count in" any candidate deemed necessary for the furtherance of their ends. In other words, Havemeyer's plurality was to be reversed, and Lawrence given the winning figures.

In order that the full scope of the conspiracy may be understood, it will be necessary to give a narrative of the events as they occurred from the hour when the Central Office was closed, yesterday morning, until late in the afternoon.

About 4½ o'clock A. M. yesterday Mr. Kelso, the Superintendent of the Police Department, left the Central Office for his home. In the corridor he was met by a TIMES reporter, who asked him how the Mayoralty ticket was running. Mr. Kelso replied that there were only two or three election districts to hear from, and that Mr. Havemeyer was elected. On further pressing of the reporter, Mr. Kelso good-naturedly took from his pocket a memorandum on a slip of paper, and permitted his questioner to copy the following figures: Havemeyer, 51,959; Lawrence, 48,505, and O'Brien 34,391. These totals gave Havemeyer a plurality of 3,454, and it is quite certain that the Superintendent was not alone in this estimate of the vote on the Mayoralty.

About 8 o'clock yesterday morning the corridors of the Central Office were remarkably full of idlers, and they seemed to be there with a purpose; for there was no possibility that any fresh news could be gained about the returns. It is quite evident, from the developments that took place later in the day, that these well-dressed runners for Tammany were under orders, and were congregated there for a specific purpose, namely, to assist in an humble way in the manipulation of the returns, and so secure the illegal defeat of Mr. Havemeyer. At the hour named above several TIMES' reporters entered the Central Office for the purpose of obtaining corrected returns from the official tables, known to be nearly complete. They found that it was impossible to get even a glimpse of the tabular statements of the vote, especially those supposed to show the figures on the Mayoralty. Commissioner Manierre had arrived a few minutes before, and his presence seemed to make a sudden stir among the loungers. Many of these men were well-known political supporters of the Commissioner, and scarcely had Manierre passed up-stairs to his room, when they began running about the building in apparent glee, informing their friends in a mysteriously confidential manner, that Lawrence was probably elected; that errors had been discovered and the actual count would give him a majority. When this assertion was made, not a single revision of the tables had been made, so far as can be ascertained. The confidential agents, on learning their cue, began circulating among their associates and the Ward politicians, who fairly swarmed the hallways and stair-cases, and soon spread the "news" that Lawrence was elected. While this by-play was progressing, another scene in the plot was enacted. In the room formerly occupied by Henry Smith, President of the Board of Police, a curious group of men had assembled, though few people about the building had seen any of them enter. Prominent among them were Rufe Andrews, Police Commissioners Manierre and Barr, Mayor Hall, and several other politicians of Democratic and Greeleyite tendencies.

Exactly how long this suggestive gathering remained in conference is not known, but it is a fact that the returns for the County ticket were carried up stairs to this room, ostensibly for quietness, and several clerks were there employed in counting and recounting the sheets. Messengers were going continually to and fro from this private conclave, and the greatest secrecy was maintained as to the proceedings transpiring in this chamber, to which no person could gain admission except through the permission of Manierre. At about 3 o'clock Mr. Barr came out of the room, looking rather chopfallen, and when asked by Rufe Andrews, who stood near by, what the prospect was, replied gloomily: "I'm afraid its all up."

Such was indeed the fact, for the figures subsequently given out by the Commissioners gave Havemeyer a plurality of 5,644, with eleven election districts to hear from. But the "news" had gone down town, and an evening paper announced it with huge head lines as "good news," which it stated was confirmed by Matt. Brennan and Recorder Hacker, the majority being given as 47. Rufe Andrews told the same story, and the same fiction is down to the present, thus showing that there must have been some understanding as to the precise "majority" for Lawrence.

But all was in vain, however, for the figures were difficult to cook, and the latest "news" from Police Head-quarters was that Havemeyer and Phelps were elected with the rest of the County ticket. If all is true that is rumored about town, the citizens of New-York have narrowly escaped a piece of deliberate fraud. The checks in the possession of Mr. Davenport's supervisors probably had an influence not to be despised.

The Political Head-Quarters Last Night.

The various political head-quarters in the City, yesterday, were closed and their former occupants departed. Col. Ethan Allen vacated the Gilsey House and settled all accounts due the establishment from the Greeleyite National Committee. Col. Allen was much depressed over the crushing defeat, but endeavored to put on a forced gayety to put the best face on the matter. W. T. Ashman, Democratic-Republican candidate for Alderman, said yesterday that he believed he was elected, but he could not tell whether or not he owed allegiance to the Democratic Party, since the Greeleyites were no more. Augustus Schell, of the Democratic National Committee, was not to be found; and, indeed, nearly all the prominent coalition politicians were invisible in the public places of the City. The leaders of Apollo Hall also kept out of the way. The runner that Lawrence was elected, drew a number of Tammanyites from their retirement to hasten to Police Head-quarters, where they received another confirmation of Havemeyer's certain victory. Donohue was afterward reported missing.

THE CITY VOTE.

Table Statement by Assembly Districts of County Officers—The Whole Republican Ticket Elected.

The following tables give the vote, as far as can be ascertained, on the Mayoralty, for District-Attorney, City Judge, Judge of the Supreme Court, and Coroner. The consolidated vote on President and Governor is also given. We append the vote on Mayor, as given by the Police Commissioners and by the Associated Press. It will be seen that the Republicans have carried all the local offices:

Havemeyer's majority, with eleven districts to hear from 5544

In the eleven election districts from which no returns have been as yet received the total of votes registered is 3,487, and the probable total of votes polled is 2,090. In no possible contingency, therefore, can the result in these districts alter the fact of Mr. Havemeyer's election, and the probability is that they will tend to slightly increase his majority.

Senator O'Brien's Head-Quarters.

The Jackson Club, in Lexington-avenue, which was throughout the canvass one of the strongholds of Senator O'Brien, was almost deserted last evening. The parlors, which during the past few days have been literally crammed with politicians and their friends, had not one solitary occupant, while in the dining-rooms and billiard-saloon together there was not more than a score of the members. Mr. O'Brien was there for a few minutes in the early part of the evening, but finding no one of note there left for his residence, thoroughly tired out. In conversation with a brother of the Senator, last evening, a TIMES reporter elicited the fact that the Apollo Hall reformers ascribe their defeat in the main to treachery among some of their own organization. It was asserted that hundreds of the members, unknown to their officers, were bought up by Tammany Hall early in the morning, some of them selling their votes for the paltry sum of $1. Some of the candidates on the Apollo Hall ticket, it was also claimed, at the last hour, in company with some of the members of the organization to which they belonged, and whom they thought they could trust, voted against O'Brien. The party is also very much disgusted with the Germans and Hebrews, whom, they assert, voted in a body for Havemeyer, although numbers of both were members of the Apollo Hall organizations.

The Advent of the Scottish Orchestra in the United States.

Our American cousins played an important part in the expedition. They not only contributed handsomely to the general fund, but they vied with the Canadians in providing the best attainable cricket and the most hearty welcome to their guests. International association were the burden of their song, and the advantages to be derived by young America from their contact with English exponents of the game were urged by the Press of all shades. The Americans have equal difficulties of climate and business to contend against; but there exists at Philadelphia and at Boston a circle under curtain of enterprise that will not let the game expire. At New-York a healthy English element alone preserves it. The club closely connected with that place at Philadelphia, at that at Boston owned a certain curtain to the enjoyment of the crowd by heavy rains. Mr. Lillywhite, the veteran of the Scottish Company, to show the Bostonians that a love of the game does exist in America, and that its preservation and maintenance would be secured by periodical visits of this nature from our side of the Atlantic. We can, in conclusion, only express a hope that many years will not elapse ere the expedition be repeated. We feel certain that the cricketers to come will re-echo the sentiment, that from Quebec to Philadelphia they neared as strangers, but to part as friends.—Bell's Life.

OBITUARY.

Major-Gen. George G. Meade.

Gen. Meade died last evening at his residence on Delaware-place, Philadelphia, of pneumonia. Few officers, during the late war, gained a higher reputation for soldiery ability. Gen. Meade was born at Cadiz, in Spain, in 1816, where his father was then residing as Consul and Navy Agent for the United States Government. Shortly after his birth, however, he came to Philadelphia with his parents, where his boyhood days were spent. At an early age he was sent to a school at Georgetown, then taught by the present Chief-Justice Chase. His parents had determined that he should enter the service of his country, and accordingly after passing a few years at a military academy near Philadelphia, he was appointed to the academy at West Point, entering that institution in 1831. He graduated with honor four years after, was appointed Second Lieutenant in Artillery, and immediately ordered to his regiment, then engaged in active service against the Seminole Indians. A year later he was obliged to resign his commission on account of ill health, but only to resume service again on the outbreak of the Mexican war. During the campaign he distinguished himself on several occasions, and at the close of the war, as an acknowledgment of his bravery, was brevetted First Lieutenant. From that time until the commencement of the rebellion he was engaged in the engineer service in the survey of the northern lakes, but on the call for volunteer troops he was ordered East, and assigned, with the rank of Brigadier-General of Volunteers, to the command of the Second Brigade of the Pennsylvania Reserve Corps; at this point Gen. Meade's career may be said to have commenced. The troops were in every sense "raw recruits," and months were employed in perfecting their organization. In the Spring of 1862, this had been done as far as circumstances would allow, and the corps of which the brigade was a portion crossed from Washington into Virginia, and became a part of the Army of the Potomac. When this army moved upon Manassas, Gen. Meade's Brigade was assigned to the Second Division of McDowell's First Army Corps, and remained with it until his brigade was added to the Army of the Potomac for the Peninsula. During this time his rank in the regular army had been raised to Major of Engineers. While on the Peninsula Gen. Meade took part in a number of severe engagements. He took an active part in the battle of Mechanicsville, and at the battle of Gaines's Mills was brevetted Lieutenant and distinguished services. At New-Market he was wounded, but was only temporarily disabled, and was soon again at the head of his division, composed of the Pennsylvania Reserves, and greatly distinguished himself during the Maryland campaign. When Gen. Hooker was wounded at Antietam, Gen. Meade succeeded to the command of the corps, and handled it with great ability during the remainder of the day. At Fredericksburg he won great honor in a desperate charge upon the rebel lines. Two days afterward he succeeded to the command of the First Army Corps, and was promoted to be a Major-General of volunteers. At Fredericksburg he again attracted attention as an officer of rare ability, and on the 28th of June, 1863, when the army was on the march after Lee in Maryland, Gen. Meade was placed in command of the Army of the Potomac by President Lincoln. The victory of the deceased during the next few weeks is too well known to require recital, as the nation vividly remembers how, overtaking Lee at Gettysburg, Meade there fought and won the battle which was the turning point of the rebellion. Leading the Army of the Potomac back into Virginia, Gen. Meade, in November, attempted to throw his army between the wings of Lee's forces lying in Winter-quarters, but, meeting with a check at Mine Run, was compelled to retire. The next Spring, Gen. Grant, as Lieutenant-General, assumed personal supervision of the army in Virginia, but Gen. Meade was continued at its head, and won new distinction by frequent exhibitions of real tactical skill during the great campaign of 1864. For his services, and upon recommendation of Gen. Grant, he was made a Major-General in the regular army, his commission bearing date Aug. 18, 1864. Gen. Meade remained in command of the Army of the Potomac up to the close of the war, and was prominently distinguished in the grand scenes around Petersburg which ended the rebellion. At the close of the war he was assigned to the command of the Military Division of the Atlantic, the most important of all the Departments at that time. In this command Gen. Meade was called to entirely new duties, which required the tact of the statesman more than that of the soldier, and he proved himself as capable here as he had during the war. With his head-quarters, established at Philadelphia, Gen. Meade passed the last five years of his life in comparative quiet, as there was nothing transpiring to call him into prominence connection with the events of the day. In social life he was highly esteemed, and was possessed of easy manners and fine address. He was of remarkable personal appearance, being tall and spare, but his figure was well-proportioned. His head was small and compact, the nose quite prominent, and the forehead high and broad. Although not a great soldier, in the sense that Grant and Sherman are such, he was a commander of great merit, and as the victor of Gettysburg will be always gratefully remembered by his country. The deceased was married in 1840, to a daughter of John Sergeant, of Philadelphia, and leaves a large family to mourn his loss.

Rev. Alvah Guion.

Rev. Alvah Guion, one of the oldest Episcopal clergymen of Brooklyn, died at his residence, on Lafayette-avenue, in that City, on Monday last. Mr. Guion came to Williamsburg twenty-two years ago from Bedford, Westchester County, where he had been born in 1796. In Williamsburg he soon established a congregation, and built Grace Church, of which he continued rector for nearly twenty years. In 1867 he resolved to establish a church in what was then the extreme upper portion of Brooklyn, and after three years of hard work Guion Church, in Greene-avenue, was opened for service. Old as he then was, Mr. Guion continued the active duties of his parish until about a year since, when failing health compelled him to relinquish a considerable portion of his work. Mr. Guion was also distinguished for an unflagging energy and zeal in the cause of religion, and he leaves many sincere friends, besides a widow and four children. The funeral takes place to-morrow, the service being conducted by Bishop Littlejohn, assisted by several of the Episcopal clergymen of Brooklyn.

Steam-Ship Burned.

Late Tuesday night a fire broke out on the steamer Grenada, owned by Murphy & Co., of New-York, and lying at the foot of Partition-street, Brooklyn. The vessel had been chartered to run from Boston to Charleston, and there was a large quantity of inflammable material on board to be used in the repairs that the vessel was undergoing. The flames communicated with this before the Fire Department could be effectively on hand, and the vessel was soon enveloped. She burned almost to the water's edge. The loss is estimated at $50,000; insured. The Grenada was an old vessel, pretty well worn out.
